Unauthorized Strike Perils Union Pacts, G.M. Cautions

Nearly 15,000 Jobless as Sit-Downers Hold Body Plant.

Coast Church Group Asks Intervention in Labor War.

On the Labor Front.

General Motors Corporation warned sit-down strikers holding its Fisher Body plant at Pontiac, Mich., that their action may "make agreements valueless and collective bargaining impossible in practice." The strike was unauthorized by the United Automobile Workers.

Another "wild-cat" sit-down strike halted production at the Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co.'s three plants at Akron, Ohio. Nearly 12,000 employes were made idle.

The Portland, Oreg., Council of Churches appealed to President Roosevelt and the National Labor Relations Board to halt a C. I. O.-A. F. of L. labor war which slowly was paralyzing business and industry.

Defiant Men Warned.

By the Associated Press.

Pontiac, Mich., Nov. 19.—General Motors Corporation warned defiant sit-down strikers holding its Fisher Body plant here tonight that their action may "make agreements valueless and collective bargaining impossible in practice."

The strikers, defying both management and their own international union, held the plant for the third night in protest against the company's intent to dismiss four union men it held responsible for an earlier strike. Nearly 15,000 workers were idle.

William S. Knudsen, G. M. president, said the corporation "finds itself in the position of being held up in the plant operations by a minority of the employes in the plant refusing to recognize the existing agreement and openly defying the officers of their own union."

International officers of the United Automobile Workers, who called the strike "unauthorized" and refused the strikers financial aid, moved to lay the dispute before the National Labor Relations Board. The U. A. W. would charge discrimination to the Fisher company, it was said.

A changing force, estimated at 200, held the Fisher plant. Thousands milled about outside.

Strike Closes Rubber Plant.

Akron, Ohio, Nov. 19 (AP).—Sit-down strikers, protesting against scheduled lay-offs of 1,600 workers, halted production today at the Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co.'s three Akron plants. Nearly 12,000 employes were made idle.

John House, president of Goodyear Local, United Rubber Workers of America, said the sit-down was a "spontaneous outburst" resulting from announced company plans for the layoff. House announced his union local would consider the sit-down at a meeting Sunday, but said the demonstration which started last midnight was without U. R. W. A. authorization.

C. C. Slusser, vice president of Godyear, said the three plants would reopen Monday "for those who want

Beauty Slain in Tryst; Mate of Friend Held

Bride-to-Be Found in Bed in Cabin; Suspect Calls Her Suicide.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Lynchburg, Va., Nov. 19.—John S. Whitlow, Lynchburg shoe worker, was charged today with killing pretty, dark-haired Ocie Turner, bride-to-be, in a tourist cabin on the outskirts of Appomattox.

Whitlow, husband of Miss Turner's "best girl friend," paced his jail cell, in the shadow of historic Appomattox Courthouse. He clung to his story that the 23-year-old victim, who was to have married a friend of his on Christmas Day, committed suicide. The groom-to-be was Harold M. Holt, also a shoe worker.

Won Beauty Election.

"She shot herself," Whitlow said. "I heard a pistol crack and I ran into the cabin and I found Ocie dead. There she lay—dead in bed."

Miss Turner recently was voted the most beautiful girl employe of the Craddock-Terry Shoe Co. here.

Commonwealth's Attorney Abbitt, Appomattox, said Whitlow would be given preliminary hearing before Trial Justice L. F. Ferguson in time for the case to be certified for the December term of court.

Officials continued sorting evidence.

Miss Turner, Whitlow, Whitlow's wife and Holt all worked in the big shoe plant. They were the best

Nurse Is Found Strangled Near Saw Mill Road

Baltimore Man Identifies Body; Bruises Point to Severe Beating.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Glen Burnie, Md., Nov. 19.—Mrs. Mary May Marlow, about 45, a practical nurse, was found strangled to death today in a clump of woods off the old Saw Mill road near here.

The position in which the body was found indicated that it had been taken from an automobile and dragged about 20 feet to a place where it was partly screened from the roadside by the trees. Chief J. L. Souers, of the Anne Arundel County police, said he believed the women had been murdered in Baltimore.

The body was identified late today by R. C. Percy, of Baltimore, who, according to police, had employed Mrs. Marlow in his household as a nurse for his wife.

Motive Is Lacking.

Police admitted they were without any clews to a motive for the murder. Fingermarks on the woman's neck indicated the murderer had strangled her with his hands, Chief Souers stated.

The woman's face also was badly

Wealthy Recluse, Friend of Poor, Is Stricken at 83

Cincinnati, Nov. 19 (AP).—White-haired colored persons, second-hand shopkeepers and neighborhood tenants inquired today of the serious illness of their philanthropist benefactor, William P. Devou, 83, who lived alone with his millions and aversion to women.

Police broke in the door of his tiny headquarters in the rear of a storeroom and found the wiry little old man suffering alone with pneumonia.

Friends estimated his wealth today at from $8,000,000 to $18,000,000. Tenants said he discarded a ledger a year ago and with it accounts for back rent etsimated from $200,000 to $500,000.

He protested being taken to the hospital Wednesday, but his physician, Dr. J. T. Clear, reported today that his condition was "improved" and that he had acquiesced to the enforced confinement.

Japanese Seize German Boats; Soochow Falls

Reich Protests Taking of Tugboats at Shanghai, Exchange of Flags.

By the United Press.

Shanghai (Saturday), Nov. 20.—The German consulate general revealed today it had protested to the Japanese consulate general against the "seizure of two German tugboats, flying the German flag, by armed Japanese forces," in Shanghai.

The two ships were seized Tuesday by Japanese bluejackets who hauled down the German flag and ran up the Japanese naval ensign, the protest alleged, adding that Japanese crews took the vessels up the Whangpoo River.

The commander of the French gunboat Daudard de la Gree attempted to prevent seizure of the boats, which were tied up at French-owned docks, but he was ignored.

The protest recalled that German authorities earlier had notified the Japanese as to the position of all German ships around Shanghai, wherefore the incident "was not likely to have been the result of an accident."

Japanese Take Soochow.

Shanghai (Saturday), Nov. 20 (AP). Japanese announced capture today of Soochow, China's "Paradise Under Heaven," and center of the main Chinese defenses between Shanghai and Nanking.

May Evacuate Nanking.

Shanghai, Nov. 19 (AP).—China's leaders at Nanking debated tonight whether to defend the capital at all costs or, by voluntary withdrawal as the Japanese approached, save it from destruction by Japanese warplanes and guns.

Japanese asserted their legions drew closer to Nanking as hammer blows in the center, right and left of China's "Hindenburg Line" weakened that defense system some 50 miles west of Shanghai but still 125 to 150 miles from Nanking.

U. S. Envoy Ready to Leave.

Nanking (Saturday), Nov. 20 (U.P.). The United States gunboat Luzon today began loading the American Embassy's most important papers and baggage of Ambassador Nelson T. Johnson and nine other staff members for evacuation of Nanking. The Embassy was awaiting only word from the Chinese government that it was officially moving its departments into the interior before the Americans leave the city for Hankow.

Obliteration of Hospital Mural Evokes Artists' Condemnation

The District Artists Union last night adopted a resolution condemning the obliteration of Alan Flavelle's unfinished WPA mural in the heliotherapy room of the Glenn Dale Sanitarium as "wholly pre-emptory, ill-advised and undemocratic."

The resolution demanded "that steps be taken to assure the artist an opportunity to complete the work in full."

Citing the threat to the "Mother Goose" mural of Miss Bernice Cross in the same hospital, the motion called for "reinforcement of the democratic procedure so that further destruction of works of artistic merit will be certainly prevented."

In the absence of a lecturer scheduled to speak on "Artists—Men or Mice?" last night's meeting took on ironic significance as members buzzed with angry protest against the action of Dr. D. L. Finucane, hospital superintendent, in order-

U.S. Angered By Blame as Peace Fails

President Should Inquire Into Brussels Parley, Sen. Lewis Asserts.

British Arms to China, Bullitt's Poland Visit Arouse Alarm.

The Diplomatic Front.

The Roosevelt foreign policy was assailed and defended in both Houses, with resentment manifest at alleged attempts to blame the United States for meager Nine-Power Conference results.

Senators Vandenberg and Lewis demanded an investigation of reports Ambassador Bullitt visited Poland to warn Warsaw against joining the Italo-German-Japanese anti-Communist pact.

The State Department insisted Bullitt was on a social, personal visit to Poland.

In Paris, Foreign Minister Delbos said that the Nine-Power Conference "failure" to achieve mediation of the Sino-Japanese war still proved American-French-British unity.

Congress Resents Blame.

By the United Press.

Resentment over alleged efforts at the Brussels Nine-Power Conference to blame the United States for the Far Eastern crisis swept through both Houses of Congress today.

Reports that the British government has approved huge arms shipments to China in accordance with an "arm China" movement emanating in certain European chancelleries last week, caused genuine alarm in official and political quarters.

Meanwhile, defense of President Roosevelt's foreign policy was mingled with biting criticism for his failure to invoke the neutrality law and demands on the State Department for explanation of activities of certain American statesmen in Europe.

Pittman "Discouraged."

High lights included:

Senator Key Pittman (Democrat), Nevada, chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee, said he was "rather discouraged" over outcome of the Nine-Power Conference; defended the neutrality law as amply equipped to keep the United States out of the Sino-Japanese war.

Senator J. Hamilton Lewis (Democrat), Illinois, declared President Roosevelt should investigate conditions surrounding the Brussels Conference and withdraw American representation if it was found advisable; earlier, Lewis joined with Senator Arthur Vandenberg (Republican), of Michigan, in demanding an explanation of the presence in Poland of American Ambassador William C. Bullitt who reportedly went there to caution the Warsaw government against joining the Italo-German-Japanese anti-communist pact.

Bullitt's Mission Denied.

The State Department described this report as "utterly ridiculous" and said Bullitt had gone to Poland to visit "his old friend," American Ambassador Anthony Drexel Biddle.

Representative David J. Lewis (Democrat), of Maryland, introduced a joint resolution in the House authorizing the President to embargo munitions and other war materials, except foodstuffs, to Japan and to join other nations in exerting economic pressure to shorten the Sino-Japanese war.

Sen. Pittman recalled that the Nine-Power Treaty, authority for the Brussels conference, was not intended as an alliance, and, in response to questioning regarding the possibility of American action to

Clerk Wins $1,500 For Tip Bringing Brady Gang's End

Alertness of Everett S. Hurd, Bangor, Me., hardware clerk, won him $1,500 yesterday. That was the reward offered by the Department of Justice for the capture of the gang, shot down on a Bangor street October 12.

Hurd noticed three men who came into his store to buy firearms and told Bangor police and Maine State troopers about them. The result was the gun fight which ended in the death of Alfred Brady and Clarence Lee Shaffer and the capture of James Dalhover.

J. Edgar Hoover, head of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, recommended Hurd for the reward though there were numerous claimants, including Bangor police.

Raids Reveal Wide Plot to Seize France

Chautemps Cites Crisis of 'Terrible Gravity;' Chamber Acts.

Arms of Italian and German Make Found in Secret Forts.

By the Associated Press.

Paris, Nov. 19.—Premier Camille Chautemps told the Chamber of Deputies tonight a situation of "terrible gravity" had been disclosed by the government's investigation of secret revolutionary societies.

Mobile guards were stationed about government buildings as police struck at a suspected Rightest Revolutionary Committee, organized to seize power, and apparently capable of waging warfare on a nation-wide scale.

Chautemps said the government would ask special legislation to reinforce its action against a secret society known as "Les Cagoulards" —"The Hooded Ones."

Vote of Confidence.

The chamber gave the People's Front government a 399-to-160 vote of confidence after Chautemps pledged the cabinet to preserve "republican order."

After a conference with Chautemps, Minister of the Interior Marx Dormoy said "the affair is getting bigger and more serious every minute."

Large stores of arms and ammunition, including anti-aircraft, anti-tank and even field guns, were discovered by police in a series of raids throughout the country. The government is seeking the financial and political backers of the organization.

Italian Arms Found.

The disclosure last September of "Les Cagoulards" put the government secret police on the trail of a parent organization. Now the government believes one section of the Revolutionary Committee has been smashed.

Police found not only arms, many of which were of Italian and German make, but secret radio sets and parts of uniforms in the raids.

The newspaper Ce Soir said the plot had developed to an extent that "a high military personality—one whispers the name of a marshal of France—has been approached by a group asking if he would preside over a new government which would be formed." The Communist newspaper L'Humanite charged Gen. Edouard Duseigneur, retired chief of aviation, was the leader of "Les Cagoulards."

Weather Bureau Warns of Capital's First Snow Today

The season's first snow will fall before dawn here today, the Weather Bureau predicted last night, warning the mercury probably would sink to 26 and rise, at most, to the mid-thirties during the day. The forecaster said tomorrow would be cold, with gentle shifting winds.

The American Automobile Association warned motorists to look to antifreeze for their radiators and suggested heavy oils be replaced by lighter ones.

Temperature here reached a maximum of 43 at 2 p. m. A minimum of 39 was recorded at 7 a. m.

Western Maryland experienced its first general snowfall of the season yesterday, but the flakes melted as soon as they touched the ground. Roads were sluggish at Cumberland and Hagerstown.

Philippine Storm Toll Raised to 123

Manila, Nov. 19 (AP).—The Philippines' worst typhoon in a quarter-century caused still more destruction in the central islands tonight, and incomplete reports from devastated regions showed 123 known dead and $4,000,000 damage.

Many centers had not been heard from since the storm began Wednesday. The greatest loss of life was by drowning at sea. Small boats caught in the 100-mile wind lost 65 crew members and passengers.

Monopolies Inquiry Ordered by Roosevelt To Halt Rise of Prices

Trade Commission Told to Get Facts Behind Sharp Uptrend.

Cummings Asks Grant of Million

Home Building Revival by Private Enterprise Believed Goal.

By Franklyn Waltman.

Striking out at rising living costs, President Roosevelt yesterday called on the Federal Trade Commission to make an immediate investigation of monopolistic practices and other "unwholesome methods of competition" which have increased prices to the consumers.

Chairman W. A. Ayres, of the Federal Trade Commission, announced he had called a meeting of that body for 10 o'clock today to discuss ways and means of meeting the President's request as promptly as possible. He declined to predict what line the inquiry might take.

How extensive the proposed inquiry may be was not indicated, except that the President in his letter to Chairman Ayres indicated that no additional appropriations would be allowed the trade commission for this purpose. The commission, however, has voluminous data in its files regarding monopolistic practices in various types of industries, and these studies, it was said, could be brought up to date quickly without any great expenditure.

Cummings Seeks Grant.

Mr. Roosevelt's action, taken by him as he recuperated in his study from a tooth extraction, came on the heels of Attorney General Homer S. Cummings' announcement that he was seeking an additional $1,000,000 for the prosecution of antitrust suits. This sum would be used for the employment of additional lawyers, investigators and clerical help in the antitrust division of the Justice Department.

The President indicated his interest in industrial monopoly in his fireside chat in October calling Congress into special session, and again last Monday, when in his message to Congress he emphasized the necessity of taking steps to check the "growing concentration of economic control and the resultant monopolistic practices which persist today in spite of antitrust statutes."

President's Letter.

His letter calling on the Trade Commission, addressed to Ayres, was as follows:

"My attention has been directed to reports of a marked increase in the cost of living during the present year, as compared with recent years past, attributable in part to monopolistic practices and other unwholesome methods of competition.

"I believe it to be important to know the facts touching this situation, and, therefore, request the Federal Trade Commission to make an immediate investigation into such alleged practices and methods and report to me as early as practicable.

"I understand such inquiry can be made without any increase in your current appropriation."

Sharp Climb Reflected.

Labor Department statisticians who compute an index figure on the cost of living, as well as other price movements, asserted that, based on information from 32 large cities, the cost of living index had advanced from 82.4 on December 15, 1936, to 85 on September 15, 1937, the last date which such figures were available.

One expert explained that the

Concessions Granted In Tax Revision Drive

House Subcommittee Extends Undivided Profits Levy Exemptions; 'Be Patient,' Senate Leadership Asks of Business.

By Robert C. Albright.

Tax concessions by a House sub-committee and a plea from the Senate leadership for business to "be patient" yesterday accompanied new impetus for speedy tax revision, as the "extraordinary" session of Congress rang down the curtain on a fruitless first week.

Alone of the measures on the President's agenda, the "ever normal granary" bill was virtually ready for Congress. The Senate Agriculture Committee was preparing for a vote today on the farm bill, and a House committee planned week-end sessions, if necessary, to speed action.

Both House and Senate ceased work until Monday, the Senate after the fourth day of an anti-lynching bill fight that yesterday featured for the first time a woman filibusterer—Senator Dixie Bibb Graves, of Alabama.

Alert Senate Minority Leader Charles L. McNary blocked a majority leadership move to permit a farm bill report during the week-end, so the measure could be called up Monday.

Tax developments brought new resistance from leaders to special session revision of the undivided profits tax and capital gains levy, but renewed support from bi-partisan ranks for immediate modification or repeal.

The House Ways and Means Tax sub-committee, at work on a tax bill for action next session, decided to extend exemptions from the undivided profits tax to corporations above the $5,000 earnings class, but to raise corporation income taxes to offset the revenue loss. The group also agreed on a three-year exemption from the undivided profits tax for companies emerging from bankruptcy or reorganization.

Auto Kills 'Jiggs,' Cafe Owner Whom Bandits Could Not Slay

Arthur, "Jiggs," Berman, 62-year-old proprietor of Jiggs' Cafe, who cheated death three years ago when he was shot in a gun battle with two bandits was killed by an automobile last night. After making good his oft-repeated boast that no holdup man who accosted him would "get away with it," he was the ninety-second traffic victim of the year.

The tavern keeper, who lived at 4238 Georgia avenue, and ran a lunchroom and beer parlor in the next block, was struck by a car driven by Ben F. Powers, 28, of 5024 Second street northwest, as he sought to cross the street in front of his home. He died in Emergency Hospital.

One night three years ago two robbers came into Jiggs' cafe.

"Put 'em up!" they ordered.

"You can't get away with it," Berman snarled.

He dived for one of the men and wrested his gun from him. The other bandit shot "Jiggs" twice in the chest, and the two fled.

Physicians gave the cafe man up as dying, but his rugged constitution enabled him to recover.

Senate, House Race to Finish Rival Crop Bills

Lone Voice of Minority Chief Blocks Report at Once on Granary Plan.

Spurred by Southern efforts to displace the anti-lynching bill, the Senate Agriculture Committee yesterday prepared to act at once on the Administration's "ever-normal granary" bill in an attempt to lay it before the Senate by next Tuesday at latest.

Racing against time and the Senate, the House Agriculture Committee voted modifying changes into a widely different version of the farm bill and scheduled week-end sessions for finishing touches.

The No. 1 measure on the President's special session agenda—and the only one now having a green light—meantime met a temporary set-back in the Senate, when a single objection blocked an effort to make it Monday's business.

Debate May Last a Week.

Encouraged by Agriculture Committee progress, Senate Majority Leader Barkley asked unanimous consent for the group to file its report today or tomorrow. Senate Minority Leader McNary objected. The bill now may not come up until Tuesday, and Barkley has predicted debate will last a week.

The Senate bill, studded with compulsory control features on cotton and other commodities, and the House bill, striking a so-called "middle course," drew the Senate fire of Senator William E. Borah (Republican), Idaho.

Borah assailed Secretary of Agriculture Wallace's ever-normal granary device for storing crops in fat years for use in lean seasons, and opposed "reducing a single acre in the United States as long as some men are hungry."

Would Feed Needy.

The Idahoan said in the Senate that bumper crops should be used to feed the people when they need food, rather than limit supply by restricting production.

A House Agriculture Committee earlier rejected a sub-committee proposal for processing taxes of 20 cents a bushel on wheat by a vote of 15 to 8. The action left the tentative farm bill without processing taxes on wheat. No other committee exists to finance the program.

Coinciding with this action, the Bureau of Agricultural Economics concluded from a study of processing taxes levied under the invalidated AAA act that virtually all of the processing imposts were passed on to consumers.

Failure to provide processing taxes leaves the bill without means of paying for either the $500,000,000 cost of the extended soil-conservation program or the $175,000,000 to $200,000,000 additional cost of the "ever-normal granary." The financing problem may be passed on to the Ways and Means Committee.

The House committee met Wallace halfway, by approving compulsory marketing quotas with penalty taxes on corn, by a 13-to-9 vote. No processing taxes were provided for corn. The committee did not reach the subcommittee proposal for marketing quotas and penalty taxes on wheat. As the House bill now stands, a "voluntary" program has been approved for cotton and noncontroversial compulsory control for tobacco.

Week-End Sessions Slated.

Chairman Marvin Jones said he will try to move his bill before the House next week and will hold week-end sessions to this end.

In the Senate, Chairman Ellison D. Smith, of the Agricultural Committee, vigorous opponent of compulsory crop control, appeared ready to accept the drastically compulsory Bankhead-Ellender cotton control plan, imposing a 75 per cent tax on cotton grown on over-quota acres. Smith may offer minor modifying amendments, but said he will do nothing to block a speedy report of the bill.

Programs for wheat, corn, rice and tobacco, largely following lines of the Farm Bureau Federation bill pending last session, also may be voted on by the Senate committee today.

Speaker William B. Bankhead, who favors the more compulsory Senate features indorsed by his brother, Senator John H. Bankhead, predicted the farm bill "actually will have to be written in conference after passage by the two Houses."

Congress Circus Now Needs Only Gerald Nye's 'Save America From Foreigners' Drama.

By Franklyn Waltman

ENTERTAINING as the Congressional circus has been during the first week of its winter run—with Texas Tom Connally looming as a star of comedy — this greatest of all shows on the earth will not become really funny until Gerald P. Nye's minute boys rush on stage in a revival of that old heart-rending melodrama: "Save America from the Wily Foreigners."

WALTMAN.

Anyone who has not seen this old American play should not fail to do so this winter. There are signs that the minute boys will go into action any day now, and a preview of the rehearsals gives assurance that this year's performances will be up to the standard of previous years. Indeed, the boys have found a much better crop of international ghosts for this year's rendition than they have had for a long time.

Much of the performance depends on the spooks and ghosts which the boys parade through the House and Senate. Of course, Gerald Nye, who sometimes thinks he is the Secretary of State, still has that old stand-by of ghosts, neutrality.

Bewhiskered J. Hamilton Lewis thinks the Brussels conference makes an excellent ghost, while Arthur Vandenberg has snatched up a spook in the form of an obviously silly newspaper dispatch that President Roosevelt has sent William Bullitt from his Paris Embassy up to Warsaw to tell Polish Foreign Minister Beck not to have any traffic with the Italo-German-Japanese anti-communist pact.

Of course the sillier the rumor, the better spook it is supposed to make. The fantastic is then added to the mysterious and unknown to raise the goose pimples on the audience.

Other minute boys whose performances always are worth attending are Representative Hamilton (Lettuce Crate) Fish, who has a copyright on the Communist spook, and bewhiskered George Holden Tinkham, a versatile juggler with all the other spooks. Incidentally, we wonder why the only two bewhiskered gentlemen in Congress, Messrs. Lewis and Tinkham, believe they can run the country's foreign relations better than the Secretary of State. Maybe it is because Charles Evans Hughes has a beard and once was Secretary of State.

Of course, Gerald Nye does not need much rehearsing. He has been trouping on the road for the last month, expounding his neutrality views as a professional lecturer at several hundred dollars an appearance. Gerald not only gets fun out of his neutrality act—he makes money out of it. The publicity he gets from his appearances under the big top on Capitol Hill should entitle him to charge a higher lecture fee to the rubes out in the sticks next year.

But Senators Lewis and Vandenberg need a little rehearsing. This act is a political performance for them and they work at it only when Congress is in session. Neither would sell their views in their spare time for lecture honorariums. Senator Lewis finds his performances, however, very useful back in Chicago, where the Italians and Germans do not think much of the English. Senator Vandenberg is shooting for a bigger prize—and, anyway, when a fellow is running for President he has to keep his name on the front page somehow.

Among the choice lines of this year's rendition of the old melodrama will be such soul-searching contentions as: "Remember the World War" and "Keep our diplomats at home—they give such nice parties," and, of course, that greatest of all lines: "Don't pull British chesnuts out of the fire."

There is a serious side to all of this, and it is that a number of people, including some of the foreign diplomats here, do not know that the minute men are engaged in the rendition of an old melodrama. They think they are serious. Some of them think they represent the American people and really are directing the course of American foreign relations.

Indeed, some of the foreign diplomats here, perhaps under promptings from their dictator chieftains at home, like to encourage the idea that the Nye minute boys are directing American foreign policy and that Secretary of State Cordell Hull is just a nice old gentleman who should be protected from the other wily foreigners.

Another serious aspect of this Capitol Hill clowning is that some of the American people regard it seriously and are misled into believing that if Congress should pass a neutrality law, this country, ipso facto, would forever enjoy the blessings of peace. So widespread is this viewpoint that the Nye minute boys now want to chastise President Roosevelt for failing to invoke their silly neutrality law.

But the majority of Congress will not agree with them. At last it is becoming clear that the Nye minute boys do not know what they are talking about when it comes to international relations and, anyway, the American people believe Messrs. Roosevelt and Hull are just as wise and just as patriotic as the cornfield and other minute boys.

Since the show, however, must go on, let us pose just two questions to the minute boys. In what specific way has the President's failure to invoke the neutrality act been to the disadvantage of the United States and would not the United States, if it had invoked the neutrality act last summer, now be blamed for the crushing defeat which the Japanese are imposing on the Chinese? Are not Americans pulling Japanese—and perhaps German and Italian—chestnuts out of the fire when they use every occasion to criticize and embarrass their Government in the conduct of foreign policy?

Methinks clowning as well as politics should stop at the water's edge.

Lynch Bill Foes Set to Talk All Plans to Death

Sen. Dixie Graves Joins in Battle as Filibuster Continues.

By the United Press.

Southern Senators, their tempers strained to the breaking point, threatened yesterday to "filibuster to death" all major legislation, if necessary, to block passage of the Wagner-Van Nuys anti-lynching bill.

Still presenting an unbroken front after four days of tumultuous battle and bolstered by a feminine recruit—Senator Dixie Graves, of Alabama—the filibusterers prevented a showdown vote on a motion to consider the bill.

Curly-haired Senator Tom Connally (Democrat), Texas, fought to keep the filibuster alive until crop control legislation can take precedence. This will be some time next Tuesday.

Smith Accuses Wagner.

Chairman Ellison D. (Cotton Ed) Smith (Democrat), South Carolina, of the Senate Agriculture Committee, who is pushing his committee day and night to get the farm bill ready, took time out to join his fiery Southern brethren. He asserted the lynch bill was perpetrated by "long-haired men and short-haired women."

He wagged a long finger at Senator Robert F. Wagner (Democrat), New York, coauthor of the measure, and charged it was aimed to attract the colored votes of Harlem and Chicago, and suggested "it would be more decent for Congress" to make an appropriation to buy them outright.

"When and if this bill comes to a vote, I will join in a filibuster to the death against all legislation to prevent the Senate from acting on this measure," he said.

Connally, Chair Clash.

Earlier Senator Connally accused Senator Bennett C. Clark (Democrat), Missouri, of using the Senate as a "sewer" when Clark admitted responsibility for having photographs of blow-torch lynchings hung on the chamber's walls.

Clark called Connally sharply to order for making personal remarks, and when Senator Key Pittman (Democrat), Nevada, presiding, upheld Clark, the Texan launched a blast against Pittman.

"The temporary occupants of the chair have been trying to boss the Senate all week," Connally said. "Well, they won't boss me."

When the Senate recessed, the pictures were still on the wall.

Senator Graves Applauded.

Wearing a black dress with silver ornaments, Senator Graves joined the filibusterers and drew applause from her colleagues.

"I make one plea," she said in her maiden speech. "Before you seal the brows of your sister States with this brand of shame you will seek the truth."

She said that vigilance by Southern authorities was eradicating lynching rapidly, and that local officers could handle the problem efficiently.

"I abhor the crime of lynching, which the encyclopedia tells us has been common to all countries when unsettled conditions existed," she said.

Blames Cotton Price.

The Senate heard yesterday that the number of lynchings was related to the price of cotton.

Senator Pepper (Democrat), Florida, said that when the price of cotton had been low in recent years the number of lynchings increased. This was natural, he added, because when cotton prices were low the wages of colored workers were low and many were unemployed and so turned to crime.

If the Senate wants to stop lynchings, Pepper said, it should turn attention to increasing cotton prices.

Writ Is Sought To Block U. S. Truck Contract

Firm Claims Treasury Ignores Time Clause in G. M. Award.

Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau, jr., and Treasury Procurement officials must show cause in United States District Court November 24 why they should not be enjoined from ignoring a time clause in granting bids for 100 heavy duty trucks to be used on a WPA airport project at Astoria, L. I., Judge Daniel W. O'Donoghue ruled yesterday. The action was brought by the White Motor Company of Cleveland.

According to the company's complaint, it was the only one of six bidders to conform with a requirement in the bid that the trucks should be delivered at Astoria by January 1, 1938. The contract, the complaint says, was to have been awarded yesterday to the General Motors Co. for $483,611; the trucks to be delivered at Pontiac, Mich., at the rate of 10 weekly, beginning January 5.

The White company said its bid was $517,200 for the 100 trucks, delivered at Astoria January 1. It quoted the language of the proposal: "Delivery is required at destination by January 1, 1938. Time of delivery will be an important factor in making award." The company claims it was entitled to the contract as the only bidder meeting this requirement.

The complaint cites WPA officials as saying unless the trucks are delivered January 1, equipment must be rented at a cost of about 75 dollars a vehicle for a 24-hour day, or $7,500 daily for the 100 trucks until delivery is made.

The complaint was filed by Fred T. Macrae, jr., vice president of the White company, through Walter B. Guy, attorney. It named Morgenthau, Christian J. Peoples, director of procurement of the Treasury, and H. C. Maull, jr., chief of the purchasing division of the Treasury.

Bill to Aid Schulz Offered in House

A bill to take the legislative reference service of the Library of Congress away from the librarian, Herbert Putnam, was introduced in the House yesterday as the latest move to restore Dr. George Schulz to the position of director.

Representative McFarlane (Democrat), of Texas, offered the measure, which would place the service under the joint supervision of the Speaker of the House and the president of the Senate. It was referred to the House Library Committee.

The squadron, under command of Col. Roy S. Geiger, U. S. M. C., will demonstrate formation flying, dive bombing and tactical maneuvers, but will not participate in racing events, it was said.

10 Million Pounds Wrecks Wall at Bureau of Standards—but It's Only a Test.

By the Associated Press.

The Bituminous Coal Commission took away from District boards yesterday the task of coordinating prices in 16 western Kentucky counties and the coal-producing counties of Illinois, Indiana and Iowa.

The commission's order said it had concluded that "voluntary co-ordination will not be accomplished within any reasonable period of time."

FOUR SOUTHERN Senators and an Alabama Representative conferred yesterday on means of ending litigation over the naval stores industry's claim for exemption from Social Security taxes.

The conference was closed, and there was no announcement immediately whether a direct appeal would be made to the Bureau of Internal Revenue. A Federal court at Macon, Ga., held last Tuesday that turpentine producers were farmers and therefore entitled to the tax exemption.

The conference was attended by Senators Walter F. George and Richard B. Russell, jr., of Georgia; Senator Pat Harrison, of Mississippi; Senator E. D. Smith, of South Carolina; Representative Frank W. Boykin, of Mobile, Ala.; and A. L. Brogden, of Jacksonville, Fla., representing the American Turpentine Farmers Association.

The check will determine the percentage of error in the original census. The Vice President drew the number 42, which means that the forty-second out of every 50 postal routes will be canvassed. There are 92,191 routes.

On Top For 19 months

IT'S A VICTORY FOR FINER TASTE! Official figures in all 14 states* which keep records prove:

1. Since July, 1935, Blended Whiskies have steadily gained in sales.

2. For 19 months the sales of Seagram's Crowns have exceeded the combined sales of 79 other leading brands of blended whiskey in their price class.

Discriminating men are discovering that Crowns are finer—that Crowns taste better. Seagram's superior blending, born of 80 years of experience, is bearing fruit. Today, Seagram's Crown Whiskies are indisputably the "finest of the finer blends."

Based on all available official figures from July, 1935, to March, 1937, the latest figures available at time this study was made, issued by the Liquor Control Boards of 14 states: Pennsylvania, Michigan, Iowa, Idaho, Maine, Ohio, Utah, Montana, Grayson (Kentucky), Barrett's, Washington, Wyoming. It includes the sales of all blended whiskies in the price class of Seagram's Crowns—ranging at present from $6 to $7.50 per pint.

200 Complain Of 'Favoritism' In Civil Service

U. S. Employes 'Nervous' in Bringing Pleas to Him, Ellender Says.

By James D. Secrest.

A move to forestall the rapid promotion of patronage employes in the civil service got under way in the House yesterday as Government employes flocked to the office of Senator Ellender (Democrat), of Louisiana, with complaints of purported injustices.

Representative Luecke (Democrat), of Michigan, revived a bill from the last session and asked Chairman Ramspeck, of the House Civil Service Committee, for an early hearing.

His bill provides for non-competitive examinations before promotions are authorized, but it gives preference to employes who hold seniority if they pass the tests and qualify.

"I think my bill would correct most of the evils that Senator Ellender is aiming at," Luecke said.

Would Stress Experience.

"What it is aimed at chiefly is to stop the practice of getting persons with influence and political friends into the civil service with low ratings and then having them promoted rapidly to well-paying jobs over the heads of more competent and experienced men."

Luecke said his bill had been indorsed by 35 members of Congress and all but one of the Government employe organizations.

Swamped with more than 200 complaints, Ellender promised to carry the fight forward until he had placed curbs on what he terms "the little czars" in Federal bureaus.

He said he will prepare a questionnaire for complaints, so the information may be classified.

Many Fear Chiefs, Says Ellender.

Ellender said many of the employes appeared nervous and afraid despite his assurance their confidence would be respected and that they would be protected from reprisals. He said:

"I believe that the only reason why there haven't been more complaints from Government workers of discrimination and favoritism is that the employes have been scared to death of these petty bureau chiefs."

The Senator predicted that if the inquiry is conducted, and he is confident that it will be, it will bring about greater efficiency and economy.

"I know of many instances in which highly paid employes whose divisions have been wiped out have been transferred to other units and assigned to work that could be done by employes of a much lower grade," he said.

Broader Inquiry Proposed.

Representative Ramspeck raised the question yesterday as to why the proposed Senate inquiry should not be extended to include all Government employes, in or out of civil service.

Ellender, however, said he would not care to broaden the inquiry in that manner, although he saw "no reason why" all Government employes, except administrative officials, should not be placed under the merit system.

Ellender said that, while he has not worked out a plan for correcting the evil he knows exists in the civil service system, his objective is to place a curb on the authority of bureau chiefs in promotions and appointments.

"Periodic examinations probably will do this as effectively as anything," he averred.

South Pole Envoy Proves Roosevelt Reads All He Signs

By the United Press.

President Roosevelt reads before he signs his name, and Herbert M. Bratter, economics writer and "Ambassador to the South Pole," has credentials to prove it.

Bratter and his friend, Senate Sergeant at Arms Chesley Jurney, were discussing the question at a recent National Press Club dinner.

Bratter wrote on a menu, "I hereby appoint Herbert M. Bratter to be Ambassador to the North Pole," and Jurney handed it to the President.

A few moments later the menu was returned to Jurney with the word "North" stricken out, the word "South" written in, and with this observation in parenthesis, "North Pole already occupied."

D.C. Girl Slayer Freed, Says She Still Loves Him

Coroner's Jury Exonerates Waitress Who Sobs of Cruelties.

"I still love him—I shot only when I thought he was going to kill me."

These words, sobbed from the witness stand at the District Morgue yesterday, won freedom for Gladys Juanita Evans, 18-year-old blonde waitress, accused of slaying John Vernon White, 25, Government Printing Office employe. A coroner's jury exonerated her.

"He pulled me out of bed, tore off my clothes, beat me," said the diminutive waitress.

Shot Through Forehead.

White was shot through the forehead early Thursday in the couple's apartment, 624 Eleventh street northeast.

When she returned home after spending the evening with her sister and friends, White beat her, she said. Later she declared White took a revolver from a dresser and brandished it.

A moment later White abandoned the revolver and picked up an Army rifle of the District National Guard, the Evans girl said, and advanced toward her screaming:

"No one else will have you. I'm going to kill you."

The girl said she grabbed the revolver and fired.

"It is the first time I ever shot a gun," she told police.

Sister Tells of Abuses.

Mrs. Betty Weis, 51 New York avenue northeast, sister of the accused girl, testified the girl frequently had been the victim of White's wrath.

The young girl said she had lived with White since last Christmas. She was married in West Virginia when she was 15, but lived with her husband less than three weeks. White was separated from his wife.

World Dominated By 'Real Fears,' Rockefeller Says

New York, Nov. 19 (AP).—John D. Rockefeller, jr., appraised the world tonight as dominated by "very real fears," with employers and workers, as well as nations, "afraid because the area of certainty is diminishing."

He spoke at the thirteenth anniversary banquet of International House, of New York.

Fears that "stalk the earth" today, he said, are workers' "fear of unemployment," employers' "growing anxiety as to whether business can be continued and pay rolls met," and the fears of nations lest "populations overflow available land; national resources be inadequate; stronger nations and groups seek to dominate and absorb weaker ones; natural and proper trade relations be cut off, and the constant and overshadowing fear of war."

'Mad Prince' Dies; Egypt Put Him in English Asylum

Istanbul, Turkey, Nov. 19 (AP).—Prince Ahmed Seif el Dine, brother-in-law of the late King Fuad of Egypt and one-time inmate of an English mental home, from which he escaped after 25 years, died here today.

The 56-year-old prince was a brother of Fuad's first wife, Princess Chivekiar. He had lived quietly the last 12 years at his villa on the Bosphorus, after a tempestuous earlier life which gained him the title of "The Mad Prince of Egypt."

He was committed to an institution in Sussex following his attempt to shoot Fuad in a Cairo club in 1898 because he believed the King was mistreating his (Fuad's) wife.

An English newspaper, the Westminster Gazette, declared an inquiry was needed into the part played by Britain in holding the prince. The Gazette said the prince had been locked up in England when Great Britain was cementing her position in Egypt and was anxious to please the Egyptian royal household.

Report of Red D.C. Textbooks Rocks D. A. R.

Group Hears Barred Books Are Back in Schools; Orders Inquiry.

If two communistic schoolbooks banned here two years ago at the instance of the Daughters of the American Revolution have been secretly replaced on District book lists, the Daughters intend seeing that they are once more removed, they indicated yesterday at a meeting of representatives of 60 Washington chapters at the Mayflower Hotel.

Their attention was called to the alleged return of communistic propaganda to District schools when a member declared the books were now being used. Mrs. Tonnis J. Holzberg, chairman of the D. A. R. State committee for national defense, appointed a committee of her five vice chairmen to investigate the charge.

Should it be learned the books are back on lists for Washington school children, she said, a resolution asking their removal would be prepared for presentation to the Board of Education.

It was said from the floor also that Scholastic, a newspaper for high school students and allegedly red in hue, was being circulated here. The committee was instructed to investigate if the communistic tinge were true.

Members of the committee are Miss Helen M. Towner, Miss Margaret I. Fraser, Mrs. Margaret S. Zimmele, Mrs. John L. Hofer and Mrs. E. T. Andrus.

Action of the D. A. R. representatives, about 100 of whom were present, followed an address by Representative Virginia E. Jenckes (Democrat), Indiana, urging that the Japanese cherry trees at the Tidal Basin be cut into firewood as "a symbol of traitorism and disloyalty." She called attention also to communistic propaganda in the United States and urged concerted action by the 2,500 D. A. R. chapters in the country to combat its spread.

Bandits Beat Him With Bricks, Rip Pants, Miss $100

Brutally beaten with bricks by two colored bandits who ripped out the seat of his trousers but missed $100 in cash, William Hein, 38, Seventh-street poultry dealer, was under medical care last night.

He was attacked while leaving his automobile near his home at 622 Columbia road northwest by a man who said nothing before slashing him across the head and face with a brick. A second bandit ripped away the seat of Hein's trousers in his anxiety to get at his wallet and left him to stagger to the sidewalk where he fell unconscious.

His wife, Mrs. Sarah Hein, looking from a window of their home, saw him lying on the pavement.

The holdup men got his wallet, which contained only a registration card. The day's receipts of his business were in a side pocket overlooked by the bandits.

Shortly after the attack on Hein, Sergt. Thomas E. Edwards and Private S. B. Myers, who rushed to the scene in a police radio cruiser, saw two colored men on V street northwest. They captured one of the men, who, police said, admitted assailing Hein. He was lodged in Tenth Precinct station for investigation.

Police School Graduates New Traffic Squad

Experts Given 'Don't' List as They Begin Accident Prevention.

The first class of Washington's new police traffic school will be graduated today after final examinations in scientific accident investigation and prevention methods.

The morning session will be devoted to a lecture by George D. Neilson, assistant corporation counsel, on problems confronting traffic investigators in preparing cases for court presentation.

Members of the first traffic class—ready for assignments to the proposed special accident investigation squad—heard Capt. Lloyd E. Kelley, Eighth Precinct, outline seven "don'ts" in dealing with the metroing public. Capt. Kelley warned:

Make up your mind what you are going to do before stopping a driver. Don't let him off because he is polite or pile on charges because he is surly.

Don't ask him, "Where's the fire?" or "Can't you read a stop sign!" Tell him exactly where he was erring.

If you're only going to warn him, tell him so at the outset. Don't let him go with the idea that he has "talked himself out of it."

Approach every traffic case as a potential accident, not from a legal aspect. Don't merely tell the speeder he was going 32 in a 22-mile zone; tell him he was speeding on a street where three children have been killed this year.

Don't make an arrest a personal matter. If a violator wants to get mad, let him get mad at the law, not at its agent.

Make your warnings simple, logical and convincing. A "bawling out" may satisfy a policeman's vanity but it won't make a man a better driver.

Don't bulldoze violators or witnesses. Persons willing to co-operate may be struck mute when they are "ordered around."

U.S. Bolsters Stand on Spies, Navy Declares

Admiral Rowcliff's Report Cites Conviction of John Farnsworth.

The Government's position in the prosecution of offenders under the espionage act has been strengthened in the last year, Admiral G. J. Rowcliff, judge advocate general, said yesterday in his annual report.

Citing the conviction of John Farnsworth, former officer who divulged confidential naval matters to Japanese officers, Rowcliff reported that "during the past year greater stress has been laid upon the administration of the provisions of the espionage act in relation to national defense."

His report also pointed out that 81 members of the Navy or Marine Corps were "delivered" to the civil authorities for prosecution of offenses.

Within the service, 459 of a total of 507 men charged with offenses were convicted, while 43 officers of the 52 charged were penalized.

Farnsworth In Appeal.

Atlanta, Nov. 19 (AP).—John S. Farnsworth, former Naval officer, is expected to appear in Federal court tomorrow to make another appeal for freedom from a 4 to 12 year sentence imposed for violation of the espionage act.

Killer Who Became Mail Clerk Jailed For Theft of $10

San Francisco, Nov. 19 (AP).—John Albert Houchin, 39, who escaped from the New Mexico Penitentiary 17 years ago, changed his name and became a postal clerk, was sentenced to 15 months today for mail theft.

Inspectors arrested him October 29 and accused him of stealing $10 from a "test" letter. Houchin told of his escape from the New Mexico prison in 1920, after a second degree murder conviction. Seeking leniency, his attorney told the court the New Mexico incident was merely a "boyish brawl."

New Mexico will seek custody of Houchin when he is released here.

Killing Confession Verified by Body

St. George, Utah, Nov. 18 (AP).—A headless body, exhumed from an old well into which it was cast nearly three years ago, mutely verified today the strange confessions of two men of a killing disclosed by neighborhood gossip.

The body was identified as that of Spencer Malan, 35, who disappeared March 17, 1935.

First-degree murder charges were filed against Charles Bosshardt, 25, who said he killed Malan in a ranch fight and later married the man's widow, and against George Schaeffre, 33, her brother, who said he helped "dispose" of the body.

Russia Condemns Three.

Moscow, Nov. 19 (AP).—A woman and two men were sentenced to death today in a Leningrad school case on charges of mistreating students and endeavoring to provoke dissatisfactions with the Soviet regime. Eight others must serve 10 to 20 years in prison.

Unions Pledge Aid In Slaying Inquiry

Minneapolis, Nov. 19 (AP).—Labor unions throughout the Nation sent pledged aid to union headquarters here today as investigators of the slaying of Patrick J. Corcoran questioned two Chicago men whose identities have been kept secret. Police said one of the men admitted striking Corcoran Sunday.

Corcoran, head of a drivers' council, was shot to death Wednesday night. One clew faded when Cedric Adams, newspaper columnist, who predicted ten days ago that a Minneapolis labor leader would be "taken for a ride," told police he overheard the prophecy in a cafe, but could not identify the speaker.

Blame to U. S. As Peace Fails Irks Congress

hasten the end of the Sino-Japanese war, said:

"The United States making a protest at this time would be a futile act, and to go no further than the United States can go under the neutrality act would also be futile.

"The neutrality act was never intended as a repressive measure. It was solely intended to be used for the protection of the United States against becoming involved in a foreign war."

Senator Lewis said it appeared that an effort was being made to blame the United States for the Far Eastern hostilities and warned of the danger of the United States being involved.

Delbos Announces Failure.

By the Associated Press.

Paris, Nov. 10.—Foreign Minister Yvon Delbos frankly told the Chamber of Deputies today that the Brussels conference had failed in its efforts to mediate in the Chinese-Japanese war.

Defending the People's Front government's peace policy from Communist attack, Delbos declared the conference, even though failing in its aim, had given concrete proof of the union of France, Britain and the United States against the diplomacy of "bayonets."

Delbos told the deputies a new step to end the Oriental war must be taken "at Geneva," but after leaving the chamber changed the official record to read "at Brussels." He explained the "Geneva" was a slip of the tongue.

Collapse Held Inevitable.

By the United Press.

Brussels, Nov. 19.—With the United States maintaining her policy of isolation, complete failure of the Far Eastern Conference to attempt to stop the war in the Far East was considered inevitable tonight.

British Foreign Minister Anthony Eden and French Foreign Minister Yvon Delbos will come here for Monday's meeting. From this it was gathered the British and French now have definite information that the United States will not join in putting pressure on Japan.

By the United Press.

Paris, Nov. 19.—Despite a statement in Warsaw by United States Ambassador to France William C. Bullitt that his visit to Poland was "only social and private with no political significance," highly reliable persons reiterated tonight the Ambassador was in the Polish capital to convey the suggestion of the United States Government that Poland should not subscribe to the German-Japanese-Italian declaration against communism.

By the United Press.

Warsaw (Saturday), Nov. 20.—United States Ambassador William C. Bullitt left for Paris early today on the night express, saying his visit here was "only social and private with no political significance."

Diplomatic observers pointed out that Bullitt saw Polish Foreign Minister Joseph Beck three times—at a dinner given by United States Ambassador Anthony J. Drexel Biddle, jr., of Philadelphia, Monday night; at a conference Tuesday morning, and again at a dinner given by Bullitt Tuesday night.

ing obliteration of Flavelle's mural, "History of Electricity."

WPA officials said yesterday the destruction of the Flavelle mural involves legal as well as artistic questions, as any art project carried out with Federal funds becomes Federal property.

It was stated that in a similar case in California the WPA sued persons who had ordered removal of a WPA mural and obliged them to repaint it at their own expense.

Definite action by the WPA awaits Russell Parr, head of the District Federal Art Project.

Learning yesterday morning that his incomplete decoration for the ceiling of the Heliotherapy room had been painted over, Flavelle said: "Of course, I feel very strongly about the destruction of my work, but the personal issue is not as important as the larger question of the freedom of art. The whole WPA art program for the advancement of national culture is endangered when experts in one field take it upon themselves to dictate arbitrarily what is good in other fields."

Charging that the artist was taking too much time to complete the mural, Dr. Finucane had said "I didn't think much of it anyway. There were a lot of figures and designs, but I didn't know what they meant."

F. A. Whiting, jr., editor of the Magazine of Art and the first to notify Flavelle that his creation had been coated over, stated that Dr. Finucane had acted with the acquiescence of George C. Ruhland, District health officer.

Whiting, who saw the mural before it was blotted out, declared last night that Flavelle's work was among the best of the Federal art projects he had inspected during the last three years.

"Some of the ideas may have been rather abstruse," he added, "but the color and design were attractive even to children."

Intended to divert patients lying on their backs to receive heliotherapy treatment, the protected mural covered 388 square feet of ceiling space. Since patients would view the design through brown-stained glasses, Flavelle spent several weeks working out a color scheme which would surmount this difficulty. He also consulted Bureau of Standards experts in order to find a pigment which would not be affected by violet rays.

Begun in September, 1936, the work has been interrupted several times, but Flavelle said he had worked four months on the mural while lying flat on his back on a scaffold a foot below the ceiling.

The Treasury Department, he stated, places a minimum evaluation of $20 per square foot on murals in public buildings. At this rate, the value of the obliterated mural would be more than $5,000.

With Flavelle's work already painted out, artists rallied to the defense of the "Mother Goose" mural.

The Artists' Union commended Commissioner George E. Allen for his statement that no action would be taken on the mural painted by Miss Cross without the approval of a board of art critics.

to work in spite of hell or high water."

Reports of the planed reopening brought from several shop committeemen the comment that a picket line would be thrown around the plants to prevent resumption of work.

House claimed a fundamental issue was seniority rights. House estimated 4,000 workers were in the plants.

Coast Strike Paralyzes.

Portland, Oreg., Nov. 19 (U.P.).—The Portland Council of Churches appealed to President Roosevelt and the National Labor Relations Board today to halt a labor war which slowly was paralyzing business and industry.

A "state of emergency" and a midnight curfew remained in effect, and it was credited with halting incipient terrorism which forced the city council to take drastic action.

The troubles began 97 days ago when 3,000 sawmill workers voted to withdraw from the A. F. of L. and affiliate with the C. I. O.

Three Union Army Members Attend Dinner Given by D.U.V.

Veterans Brave Inclement Weather to Tell of Serving Nation in '60's; Mme. Cantacuzene Among Patrons at Affair.

Three "Boys in Blue" defied inclement weather last night to attend the annual dinner of Ellen Spencer Mussey Tent, Daughters of Union Veterans, at the Lafayette Hotel, for members of the G. A. R.

The three guest of honor were John T. Ryan, 90, senior vice-commander of the Department of the Potomac, G. A. R.; Charles Fox, 89, and William F. Dorsey, 88. In addition to being veterans of the Civil War, Ryan and Dorsey fought in the Indian wars.

Miss Grace Hurd, national treasurer of the D. U. V., spoke at the dinner. A reception, attended by Mme. Julia Cantacuzene, granddaughter of Gen. Ulysses S. Grant, followed at the society's local headquarters at 1222 New Hampshire avenue northwest.

Survives Battle of Monocacy.

Seventeen years old when he ran away from his Baltimore home to enlist in the Eleventh Regiment, Maryland Volunteers, Ryan is now the only survivor of the Battle of Monocacy (July, 1864).

In 1885, Ryan joined Custer's Sixth Cavalry to fight Comanches and Kiowas in Texas.

He now is keeper of the Executive Door of the House of Representatives.

Also an Indian fighter, Dorsey was only 15 when he joined Company G, First Colorado Cavalry, in February, 1865. Eleven years before Colorado became a State, Dorsey was gunning for Apaches and Comanches in the vicinity of Denver.

An employe of the Government Printing Office for a quarter of a century, he has been a member of the Typographical Union for 69 years. He lives at 3222 Twentieth street northeast.

Enlisted at Age of 16.

The third veteran at last night's dinner, Mr. Fox, of 1009 Rhode Island avenue northeast, enlisted in the Thirty-ninth New Jersey Volunteers in 1864, when he was 16.

The banquet committee for last night's affair included Mrs. Anna McElroy, chairman, and Mrs. R. C. Rahn, Mrs. Nan Thurber and Mrs. Hester Warner. Mrs. Sylvia D. MacLaughlin is president of the tent.

Mooney's Case To Come Before Senate Dec. 15

Prisoner May Be His Own Witness at Inquiry, Plead for Pardon.

By the Associated Press.

A Congressional investigation of the Tom Mooney case, with Mooney himself as a possible witness, is scheduled for next month.

A sub-committee of the Senate Judiciary Committee will begin hearings December 15 on a resolution under which Congress would ask Gov. Merriam of California to grant Mooney "a full and complete pardon."

Senator O'Mahoney (Democrat), Wyoming, chairman of the sub-committee, said yesterday presentation of witnesses was being left to the Mooney defense committee. A spokesman for that group said that Mooney himself might appear.

Mooney is serving a life term in San Quentin for a bombing during a Preparedness Day parade.

An effort to bring Franklin Griffin, the judge at Mooney's trial, to the Congressional inquiry is under consideration.

The Mooney committee, it was said, intends to present, first of all, testimony that Mooney was convicted by perjured evidence, and follow that up with testimony on the nature of the opposition to efforts to liberate him.

if I could find out where she was," Whitlow recounted.

"She told me my wife and Holt had left the factory together. I asked her to come along with me to help find them. She got in my car. We searched all afternoon. But we didn't find them."

Finally, Whitlow said, he discovered by telephone that Holt had returned home, so he turned the telephone over to Miss Turner, who talked to Holt, while Whitlow hurried to his house.

When he found Holt at home, Whitlow continued, he called him out into the yard and fired a shot over his head to frighten him.

"Holt yelled 'murder' and 'police' and fell to the ground, and I got scared and jumped in my car," Abbitt said he continued.

Whitlow said he drove to Rock Tavern, five miles from here, where he found Miss Turner.

Engaged Cabin.

"Ocie had been drinking," he said. "I thought she ought to lie down and sober up before she went home."

He continued, Abbitt said, that they decided to drive toward Appomattox. At Burge's station, near their destination, they stopped and he engaged a cabin.

"I told her to get some rest and went outside," he said. "A few moments later I went back and she wasn't there."

As he stepped outside from an adjoining room, he heard a pistol crack, Whitlow related. Rushing in, he found the girl lying in the bed, blood welling from a wound in the skull in back of her left ear. By her body lay a 38-caliber pistol—the same gun he had fired earlier in the day at Holt.

Friday Morning Music Club presents in Barker Hall the first concert of its fifty-second season. Artists: John Alden Finckel, violoncellist; Alice Finckel, pianist; Emily Coville, soprano; Helen Grimes, pianist.

Resident musicians may well regard the Friday Morning Music Club as a foster-mother of kindliest and most generous disposition. For more than half a century the organization has offered the hospitality of its programs to those singers and instrumentalists whose merits deserve recognition, thereby discrediting the theory that only those artists who come from afar are worth hearing. The weekly concerts have the air of neighborly gatherings for the enjoyment of music in the home circle, and it is under such circumstances that music is often more truly appreciated than in huge, crowded auditoriums.

The major work on yesterday's program was the richly poetic F major sonata of Brahms for violoncello and piano, persuasively played by John Alden Finckel and Alice Finckel. Their reading of the work was technically sure, clear in exposition, and musicianly in its blend of intelligence and emotion. Mr. Finckel also presented a group of three pieces by Bach, Sammartini and Mozart and his own "Moth" fluttering over muted strings.

In her individual right, Alice Finckel followed a definitely romantic vein in her readings of Chopin's G minor "Ballade" and one of Nikolai Medtner's "Contes." Her playing has the charm of freshness and vivacity. Emily Coville, deftly accompanied by Helen Grimes, sang Bach's "Komm, suesser Tod," Brahms' "Der Schmied, and two of Grieg's nostalgic lyrics: "Ragna" and "Med en Vandlilje." The moods of the songs were well projected through the sincerity of her interpretations.

Gertrude Clarke Whittall Foundation in the Library of Congress presents the fourth concert of the Stradivari bicentennial festival in the chamber music auditorium Friday night. Artists: Musical Art Quartet and Frank Sheridan, pianist. Program: Quartet in C major, Op. 54, No. 2 (Haydn); Piano Quintet in F minor, Op. 34 (Brahms); Quartet in F major (Ravel).

In the presence of another appreciative audience, the nine-section Stradivari festival progressed last evening to the fourth concert, admirably played by the Musical Art Quartet on the Cremona instruments of Mrs. Whittall's donation. The program was one that figuratively made an airplane flight over a century of music, from Haydn's C major quartet of 1780 to the Ravel quartet of 1903, passing en route the piano quintet of Brahms. In the rapid transition one had an almost simultaneous perception of the classical, romantic and modern periods.

It is in form rather than in content that the 83 quartets of Josef Haydn belong in the classical category. He was a romanticist at heart, and could not keep his genial personality out of his music. The C major quartet, a work of his 57th year, abounds in an irrepressible good humor and tireless vitality.

The Brahms piano quintet in F minor is the final avatar of a poem that underwent successive metamorphoses. Beginning as a string quintet, it transferred itself into a sonata for two pianos, and eventually found its richest expression in the combination of piano and strings. Of all his chamber music, it best exemplifies the proportions of intellect and emotion that constituted his individuality. Frank Sheridan and the quartet players gave it a virile and eloquent reading.

Ravel's quartet offers the easiest introduction to so-called modern music because of its economy of materials, its cyclic employment of the opening theme, and the clarity of its exposition.

'Be Patient,' Senate Leaders Tell Business

House Tax Committee Extends Exemptions From Levy on Profits.

Minnesota—asked a conference of House Republicans "to go on record favoring immediate repeal of the undivided profits tax."

Opposing special session tax action, Senate Majority Leader Barkley said "if business will only be patient and tolerant, I think it is safe to say that substantial tax relief will be approved by Congress very early next session."

Senator H. Styles Bridges (Republican), Vermont, introduced an amendment to repeal the undistributed profits tax. He said he would attempt to call it up as a rider on a revenue measure already on the Senate calendar "to give business a life belt in this time of stress."

Gerry Seeks "Quick Action."

Senator Peter G. Gerry (Democrat), Rhode Island, a member of the Senate Finance Committee, called for "quick action" to repeal the undivided profits tax and modify the capital gains tax. He said it would be "the greatest service that this special session can perform."

Representative Roy O. Woodruff, of Michigan, minority member of the Ways and Means Committee, and chairman of the House Republican conference, declared modifying concessions by the House tax sub-committee "are not enough" and demanded complete repeal of the undivided profits tax."

The deadlocked wages and hours bill made virtually no progress during the day. Signatures on a petition to discharge the Rules Committee from consideration of the bill reached 139, a gain of only 7 during the day. A House majority of 218 is needed.

A conference of the American Federation of Labor's departmental representatives was called for today by President William Green, to take a stand on the wages bill. Green's labor rival, John L. Lewis, of the Committee for Industrial Organization, already has asked enactment of the bill, despite its "serious limitations."

Representative Martin Dies, of Texas, a Democratic member of the Rules Committee, which has refused the wages bill House right of way, told members to "stop humbugging" the working people with promises "that we are going to lift them out of the mire by legislative decree." Dies said a majority of members did not want the bill in its present form, and denounced exemption of "industries that are notorious in the payment of low wages and the use of long hours."

More Exemptions Studied.

On the House tax front, Chairman Fred M. Vinson, of the Ways and Means sub-committee (which already had agreed on undivided profits tax exemptions for concerns earnings $5,000 or less), said the group is considering extending exemptions to corporations earning $10,000, $15,000 or even $25,000.

To do this, he said the sub-committee would have to increase the normal corporate income tax rate, adding: "You can't have your cake and eat it, too." He said several business spokesmen in 1936 told the committee they would rather have a 25½ per cent normal corporation tax rate than the undivided profits tax. Vinson said no decision was reached on how high the proposed bracket exemptions would extend.

It is estimated that in exempting all corporations with net incomes of $10,000 or less the Treasury would lose $28,000,000 in revenue. For the $15,000 corporations the loss would amount to $35,000,000 and to make corporations with $25,000 income exempt from the tax, the loss would be $50,000,000.

Corporate Income Tax Change.

Losses are estimated on the basis of the existing normal corporate tax rates. "But we are considering changes in the normal corporate income tax rates," Vinson said. "We haven't decided on the amount of increase that would be needed, but an increase to substantially the same rates that were in existence in the 1935 law would practically wipe out all of the losses that would result from exempting these corporations from the undivided profits tax."

The present law provides a normal corporate tax rate of 8 per cent on incomes up to $2,000; 11 per cent on the next $13,000; 13 per cent on the next $25,000, and 15 per cent on $40,000 or more.

The rates in existence in 1935 were 12½ per cent on $2,000; 13 per cent on $13,000; 14 per cent on $25,000; and 15 per cent on $40,000 or more.

Exemptions For Bankrupts.

Vinson also disclosed the sub-committee has agreed tentatively upon exemptions from the undistributed profits tax for a period of three years for corporations emerging from bankruptcy or reorganization. He made it clear the new normal tax rates would apply in such cases.

He said he expects the proposed schedules for new treatment of capital gains announced Wednesday to wipe out the loss of $19,000,000 that would have resulted from proposed carry over of capital losses into the second year.

The sub-committee chairman said that of all corporations filing returns in 1936, 93.94 per cent reported net income of $50,000 or less. Those with net incomes of $25,000 or less represented 88 per cent of the total numbers; corporations with net incomes of $15,000 or less, 82.96 per cent; corporations with net incomes of $10,000 or less, 77.80 per cent; corporations with net incomes of $5,000 or less, 67.59 per cent.

Limited Relief Forecast.

Minority members later met briefly to review sub-committee tax progress. Afterward, Representative Woodruff said even if Congress exempted corporations up to the $25,000 class, the relief would be limited and he would insist on "complete repeal."

"That concession may affect 88 per cent of the business concerns, but more than 90 per cent of employes, whose jobs are affected, are employed by companies in the higher brackets," Woodruff said.

Representative Knutson said he would ask Minority Leader Snell today to call a House Republican conference on the business recession. "There is no doubt in my mind," Knutson said, "that the new depression, which is now assuming alarming proportions, is largely due to the undivided profits tax and exactions of irresponsible labor leaders."

In proposing a Senate undivided profits tax repeal "rider," Senator Bridges said the tax is "killing the goose that lays the golden egg." He said he wished "to liberate business, both small and large, from the political and economic death trap which has, by frightening and penalizing investing capital, contributed largely to this 1937 depression."

Parliamentary strategists for the Senate repeal movement said an attempt to call up the revenue measure on which undivided profits tax modifiers would be offered as a rider probably would not be attempted until after farm bill action.

bruised and cut, indicating she had been beaten before she was slain.

The nurse's body was discovered by a motorist. He then drove to the home of Patrolman Daniel Donnelly, of the Ferndale police.

When Donnelly and Chief Souers went to the scene they found the body lying on its back, a woman's tan coat thrown over it. Wrapped up in a scarf which had been placed on the chest, they found her shoes and a set of false teeth, evidently belonging to the slain nurse.

Dr. Joseph S. Billingsly, of Glen Burnie, was summoned to pronounce the woman dead. Coroner Walter S. Jones, after gathering a jury to view the body, announced that an inquest will be held Tuesday night in the police station at Ferndale.

Patrolmen Harry Arthur and William L. Brown reported to Chief Souers that early yesterday they passed the spot where Mrs. Marlow's body was found, and were positive it had not been there at the time.

The body of the slain nurse lay unidentified for several hours in an undertaking establishment. Scores of residents of Anne Arundel County and of Baltimore came to view it at the invitation of police.

Monopolies Inquiry Ordered By President to Check Prices

Trade Commission Asked to Get Facts Behind Sharp Uptrend; Home Building Revival by Private Enterprise Believed Aim.

"cost of living" index figure moves very slowly as it comprises a lengthy list of items which enter into everyday living such as food, clothing, furniture, housing, fuel, electricity and house furnishing. Thus, it was contended the spread between last December and the present time reflects a relatively sharp upward movement.

For instance, it was pointed out that between last March and June household furnishing in Pittsburgh increased in price 10.6 per cent and that building materials, adding to the cost of housing, had swung up sharply. The index figure for wholesale building material prices last week was 94, compared with a figure of 87.7 a year ago.

During the last three or four months, it was explained, food prices have shown a tendency to decline as the country recovered from the effects of recent widespread droughts. But the prices of other items entering into the cost of living have moved upward relatively fast during the last six months or so.

Step to Revive Building.

Observers believed that the President in calling on the Trade Commission for an investigation was taking another step to assist in a revival of housing construction by private enterprise. One of the obstacles in that revival has been increasing costs of material, as well as of labor.

The building trades industries have been under the fire of the Federal Trade Commission in recent months. Complaints charging combinations or conspiracies to fix prices have been filed against the cement producing industry, the manufacturers of cast iron pipe and the manufacturers of window glass. Those named in these complaints, in each case, comprised the major part of the industry.

Of these three cases, the most important is that filed against 75 cement producers, alleged to produce at least 95 per cent of the country's cement output, and their organization, the Cement Institute. Importance is attached to this case, which will be heard on December 1, because use of a multi-basing point system in quoting prices is charged.

Identical Prices Charged.

The Trade Commission has charged that under this system identical delivered prices are made by every quoting producer entering into the combination, to any given destination in the United States.

The commission further charged that each producing company knows that when it refrains from offering competitive prices in the consuming areas where it has a natural advantage and receives its actual highest prices, it will receive the same freedom from price competition when the situation is reversed. In this way, the commission alleged, there is everywhere a reciprocal waiver of natural advantages with no competition in price.

The steel industry frequently has been under fire for the concerted use of a basing point system in quoting prices. For that reason the cement case is regarded as a test of the Government's contention that the concerted use of such a system constitutes a violation of the Federal anti-trust laws. In all probability the case will be fought through the courts before a definite conclusion is reached.

135th Anniversary Celebrated By Trinity Methodist Church

Oldest Congregation of Denomination in D. C. Has Had Five Names, Six Buildings and 70 Pastors.

Trinity Methodist Episcopal Church, the oldest Methodist congregation in Washington, will prove a brain-twister for historians. It has had five names, six buildings and 70 pastors in its 135 years of existence. It has organized five other congregations. Yet through all these changes its identity has remained intact.

The first Methodist in Washington is said to have moved here from Virginia in 1795, but a church was not organized until 1802. The congregation originally was named Greenleaf Point, after the site of the first temporary building, five years later the congregation moved into the tobacco warehouse on New Jersey avenue in which the Episcopalians had been meeting for 30 years. The first permanent building was a small brick structure on Fourth street, erected in 1811, and the second name was Ebenezer, adopted in 1819.

While a larger building was being erected on the Fourth street site, the members held their meetings in Odd Fellows Hall. During the Civil War the hall again served them as temporary quarters when the Government took over their new church—now called the East Washington M. E.—for a hospital. In 1870 the name was changed again, this time to Fourth Street. The final change occurred in 1897, when the congregation agreed on Trinity for the name and Fifth street and Pennsylvania avenue for the site.

Offshoots of Trinity Church include the First Methodist Portestant Church, Ebenezer Church (colored), Anacostia Methodist Episcopal Church, Twelfth Street Methodist (later merged with the Wilson Memorial Congregation), and the Tenth Street Church.

In 1824 Trinity purchased land from the Government for a burial ground, one-fourth of which was designated by the deed for the burial of Washington's paupers at expense of the church. In 1890 this burden became too heavy and the church surrendered the charter. The bodies which had been buried were moved to Congressional Cemetery.

The Rev. Dan L. Ennis, pastor of the church for the last eight years, is arranging tomorrow's 135th anniversary celebration.

"Soul and Body" is the subject of the lesson-sermon in all the Churches of Christ, Scientist tomorrow. The Golden Text is from Psalms 62:5: "My soul, wait thou only upon God for my expectation is from him."

Among the citations which comprise the lesson-sermon is the following from the Bible: "Seek ye the Lord while he may be found, call ye upon him while he is near." (Isaiah 55:6.)

The lesson-sermon also includes the following passage from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health With Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy: "Sooner or later we shall learn that the letters of man's finite capacity are forged by the illusion that he lives in body instead of in Soul, in matter instead of in Spirit."

At 8 p. m. the chorus' first musical evening of the season will feature Sir Joseph Barnby's cantata "Rebekah," lyrical setting of the Bible story of the love of Isaac and Rebekah. The solo parts will be sung by Evelina Evans Clinchy, soprano; Raymond T. Pigott, tenor, and Carroll B. Reed, bass.

First Church of Christian Science will feature the evening service at 8 o'clock at the First Congregational Church. The Rev. Howard Stone Anderson, pastor, will answer the questions: (1) Are pacifist preachers traitors? (2) Are we to have a "Roosevelt depression?" (3) Must we always have a sermon? (4) Does religion depend on belief in immortality? (5) Is Greenbelt really the "New Jerusalem?" Other features of the evening service will include a short address on "We Need Radiators," and hymn singing from the screen.

For the morning sermon the Rev. Mr. Anderson has chosen the topic "In Danger of Living."

Guest Rector To Give Talk At St. Thomas

Long Island Episcopal Clergyman to Preach Here Sunday.

The Rev. Jonathan Goodhue Sherman, rector of St. Thomas' Episcopal Church, Farmingdale, Long Island, will preach at St. Thomas' Church here tomorrow at the 11 a. m. service.

The Federal Diary

Reg. U. S. Patent Office.

By Scott Hart.

Unfair to Workers.

Local 12, United Federal Workers of America, has recently concluded what seems to be more than a casual investigation of how the ghost has walked in the Labor De- for legislation establishing auto- partment and concludes that a need matic pay increases "is clearly shown."

In the survey, the years 1927-36 were covered. In sketch, the findings amounted to these. The average Labor Department employe has had to wait five years for a raise . . . When such raises have come, they have involved such sums as $60 a year . . . Not a single administrative increase was granted in 1932, and only one in the following year . . . Of every 100 employes receiving $2,000 and under in the Department, the following number received administrative increases:

To go into the conclusion of the report: "The need for legislation for automatic pay increases is further evidenced by the haphazard way in which increases have been granted to employes receiving $2,000 and under. Variations as between bureaus and as between different employes in the same bureau bear no relation to the quality of the work done by the workers concerned.

"In 1931, increases went to one out of three workers in Immigration and Naturalization, but to none in the Women's Bureau. In 1935, practically no increases were granted in Immigration and Naturalization, but one out of four workers in the Children's Bureau and one out of five in the Bureau of Labor Statistics received an increase.

"In the B. L. S., increase to employes getting less than $2,000 were granted to one in 17 in 1931, to none in 1932, 1933 and 1934, to one out of ten in 1935 and to none again in 1936. A somewhat similar picture is presented by the record of every other bureau," the report indicated. The study from which the figures were taken was made with department consent and on the basis of questionnaires. The results are herewith printed as the Congress gets under way with intention of straightening out the major kinks.

Central Agency.

The American Federation of Government Employes views another section of the field and recommends the establishment of an adequate transfer and reinstatement service under the Civil Service Commission. The Commission's functions, regarding transfers and reinstatements are at present much restricted, the A. F. G. E. feels, adding that an adequate transfer system, as outlined at several A. F. G. E. conventions, would comprise a central agency to facilitate transfers within the service. And this through etsablishment of a medium whereby persons seeking transfer could locate vacancies with little difficulty and be certified to appointing offices in the agencies and localities where they wish to be employed.

This is not a matter of pulling square pegs out of round holes, in the A. F. G. E. viewpoint. The commission has estimated that an efficient transfer service could be established for about $25,000. "It would be difficult to find a better bargain in the way of efficiency and morale for so small an amount of money," comments the employe organization.

"A great many employes, for one reason or another, want transfers, and most of them would render better service in a position or locality more to their liking than in the ones where they are now placed," it was said yesterday by A. F. G. E. President Stengle. "At present there is a tremendous amount of lost motion because there is no central bureau to assemble information regarding vacancies in the service.

"Because of this fact, it is so difficult for persons who want transfers to get information about positions that might be open to them that appointing officers fill jobs from eligible lists, rather than by transfer or reinstatement, because so much time is lost if the latter method is followed. Unless the situation is remedied, filling jobs through transfer or reinstatement will soon be almost unheard of, although many personnel officers would rather do that, if it were practicable, in order to get experienced help. When the cost is so minor an item, the importance of remedying the situation becomes all the greater," Stengle stated.

Contract

The Danger of a Switch.

One of the oldest plays known to the modern generation of bridge players comes from the eighteenth-century whist players at Bath, the famous English resort. Known as the Bath Coup, it consists in allowing an opponent's King to hold the first trick when the lead has come up to A-J-x. If the suit is continued, the Ace and Jack will both make tricks. The play occurs frequently in modern bridge, but there are situations in which it should not be employed. Today's hand is an example.

South, dealer.
Neither side vulnerable.

	♠ Q 10 9 8 3 ♡ 8 6 5 ◇ A Q 7 ♣ 8 2
♠ K 6 4 2 ♡ 9 4 ◇ 8 6 ♣ K Q 10 9 3	West North East South	♠ — ♡ K Q J 3 2 ◇ J 10 4 3 ♣ 6 5 4
	♠ A J 5 ♡ A 10 7 ◇ K 9 5 2 ♣ A J 7

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 N T	Pass	3 N T	Pass
Pass	Pass

North's raise to three notrump was a slight stretch but cannot really be criticized. Ordinarily a player should have two honor tricks and a long suit for a raise to three notrump. North, however, was so close to the required holding that he feared the consequences of any weaker bid. He would have been more conservative had he foreseen that his partner would misplay the hand and lose a laydown contract.

West opened the King of clubs and South automatically played low, seeing the combination of cards which permitted him to make the Bath Coup. West was not to be trapped, however, into continuing his clubs. Fortunately for his side he hit upon the heart shift. East played the Jack, and South was a most unhappy declarer. If he took the Ace of hearts at once, an unsuccessful spade finesse would permit the entire heart suit to be run against him; if he allowed East's Jack of hearts to hold the trick, a club would be returned and that suit would be established against him. Since the spade King was offside it did not matter which course South adopted at this point; he was bound to be defeated.

South should have made his contract by resisting the temptation of the Bath Coup. He should have seen the danger of a switch to hearts, and won the first trick with his Ace of clubs. Dummy could then be entered with a diamond for a finesse of the ten of spades. West would probably allow the ten of spades to hold, but on a second spade lead from dummy East's discard would show South the true situation. He would then play the Ace of spades and return the Jack, overtaking with dummy's Queen if West still refused to take his King. Dummy's remaining high diamond would furnish entry to the long spade. South would, therefore, make four spades, a heart, three diamonds and a club, for his contract.

Why a Famous Scientist Says That Science Is Not Enough

An Interview With Dr. Alexis Carrel By Agnes E. Meyer

Is it true that science has failed? Has man's progress in invention, medicine, technology made him worse off, instead of better? Why has one of the world's greatest scientists—Nobel Prize winner, member of the famous Rockefeller Institute for Medical Research, co-inventor with Lindbergh of the mechanical heart—turned his back on research and declared that the rest of his life will be devoted to study of fitting man into the new world science has created? The Mission Of Lord Halifax.

Lord Halifax, minister without portfolio in the British cabinet, has been spending the last few days in Germany on what has been described as the most important British mission to the Reich since Lord Haldane's day.

This may and may not prove to be an exaggeration. But the very circumstance that the outcome of Lord Halifax's conversations with Germany's leaders is being awaited with such eagerness throughout Europe shows how important are Anglo-German relations in present-day international affairs.

During the past few years a succession of British statesmen have tried, directly and indirectly, to bridge the chasm that for some time has divided the two nations. There is no doubt that Great Britain would like nothing better than to achieve a rapprochement with Germany on a reasonable basis. This goal has the support of all British parties. It is believed, and not without reason, that nothing would contribute more to an easing of existing European tensions than a friendly understanding between the London and Berlin governments, particularly one in which Germany would definitely pledge herself to refrain from seeking to achieve her ends by violence. In return for such a pledge Great Britain, and probably France as well, might be willing to make important concessions.

It is not clear what offer, if any, Lord Halifax made to Hitler. There is a strong and apparently increasingly numerous group in Great Britain which supports the idea that even colonial concessions to Germany would not be out of order if the peace of the world were thereby assured. And no doubt Great Britain would be prepared to do what it could to mitigate German economic and financial difficulties in return for a change in the Third Reich's external policies.

In this connection it is probably more than a coincidence that Lord Halifax's arrival in Berlin occurred simultaneously with the announcement in London and Washington of the beginning of formal Anglo-American negotiations for a reciprocal trade agreement. Such a pact might markedly widen the area of freer world trade. Were Germany and any other nations now pursuing the path of autarchy persuaded to join in the movement, internal economic conditions within the Third Reich might be very considerably relieved.

But to fall in line with the Hull program, Germany would have to reverse the whole recent trend in her internal economy. Obviously, this would be no easy matter, even if she should be disposed to co-operate. On the other hand, should Germany refuse the olive branch of freer trade, she would more than ever, as a result of better prospective trade relations outside the Reich, be thrown back upon her own resources and those of her impoverished allies of the Berlin-Rome-Tokyo triangle.

In this respect the Halifax visit to Germany has a very considerable potential bearing on the international situation and may lead, given a reasonable attitude on the part of the Nazi leaders, to a marked easing of Europe's tensions.

A Chamber Of Peace.

No man in our times has better deserved the Nobel Peace prize than Viscount Cecil of Chelwood, recipient of this year's award.

For a score of years he has been in the forefront of the movement to rid the world of the plague of war. His contribution has been outstanding. At the Paris peace conference he was one of the architects of the League of Nations. In subsequent years he rendered yeoman service to that organization. Latterly, as head of the British League of Nations Union, he has helped mobilize public sentiment in Great Britain in favor of a realistic and constructive approach to the problem of peace.

At the moment, the League is in a state of eclipse as an agency for the maintenance of peace and the punishment of aggressor nations. But the idea of collective security on which the League rests is as valid today as it ever was. Certainly it is now plain that sentimental pacifism offers no solution to the problem of abolishing war. A product of wish fulfillment, it is not only futile but dangerous. For it offers encouragement to the aggressors to take advantage of the peace-mindedness of the other nations.

This circumstance explains why, in the face of events in the Far East, Ethiopia and Spain, Lord Cecil, together with a majority of the rank and file in the British peace movement, has swung around from a belief in the efficacy of moral force alone to the espousal of sanctions against aggressors—from a belief in the wisdom of unilateral disarmament to support of the British rearmament program. As Lord Cecil himself has pointed out:

"There is really no ground for thinking that pure pacifism would save any country from invasion or from war."

If the greatest of international scourges is to be wiped out, it must be by the united action of the peace-loving states. Of that idea Lord Cecil is an outstanding champion. In honoring him the Nobel Peace prize committee has also honored itself.

The Anti-Lynching Bill.

The circumstances under which the Wagner-Van Nuys anti-lynching bill was brought under discussion have unfortunately tended to minimize its importance. Congress was not called into extraordinary session to debate legislation of this sort. It was utterly unreasonable to divert attention of the Senate to this long-standing controversy when the need for business relief measures is acute. Yet the issue raised by this bill demands the most serious consideration.

Senators sponsoring the measure are eager to wipe out the blot of mob murder which still persists in some States. But those opposing it cannot in any respect be regarded as favoring lynching. For example, Senator George, in a forceful speech against the bill, referred to mob violence as a "horrid, horrible, brutal outrage, which no one defends." Indeed, many leaders in the persistent campaign against lynching are among the vigorous opponents of this proposed means of curbing it.

As the Wagner-Van Nuys bill stands, its principal issue is not lynching, but encroachment of the Federal Government upon the authority of the States. By passing this measure Congress would undertake to tell the States what should constitute a crime within their own jurisdictions. And if State or local officials were not sufficiently diligent in punishing such crimes, the Federal Government might "crack down" upon them. That invasion of local police powers would go a long way toward undermining the right of the people within each State to make and enforce their own laws.

The unreasonable character of the bill is clearly indicated by a recent amendment. At first the measure was directed against any State or governmental subdivision failing to protect individuals against "a mob or riotous assemblage." But it was pointed out by the then Senator Black and others that the bill might be used against strikers. So it was amended to forbid any Federal action in the case of "violence occurring between members of groups of lawbreakers such as are commonly designated as gangsters or racketeers" and "in connection with any 'labor dispute.'"

In other words, professional criminals are of no interest to the Federal Government, while amateur lawbreakers who engage in a certain type of crime are its special concern. That sort of discrimination naturally arouses the ire of Southern Senators.

Advocates of this bill have taken the wrong approach to a very serious problem. Their measure offers no co-operation with the States in wiping out despicable offenses, as does the anti-kidnaping act. On the contrary, it seeks to impose Federal penalties upon local representatives of the people. That insult might easily have the effect of stimulating sectional bitterness and thus encouraging, rather than abolishing, mob violence.

Congress might better abandon all legislative efforts to minimize lynching than to indulge in such a blunder. Before this measure is again presented to the Senate it should be thoroughly revised to a basis of co-operation between local and Federal authorities. And if that is found to be impracticable, the only reasonable alternative is to abandon it entirely.

The Housing Conference.

A number of factors favorable to increased residential building emerge from the housing conference of the United States Chamber of Commerce. The fact that such a conference was called to discuss ways and means of arresting the current slump in building suggests the interest of business leaders in the problem. Active participation by various officials of Government housing agencies indicates that they, too, are eager to co-operate.

An encouraging note was sounded by Nathan Straus, administrator of the new United States Housing Authority. "Let me assure you," he said, "that no competition with private industry is contemplated by me or, if I read the law right, is even possible under the act." Homes to be constructed under the slum clearance program will conform to "minimum standards of decency." "We want to use our funds," he continued, "not to house a few families in ideal homes, but to house as many slum dwellers as possible in decent homes."

Under this sensible policy the Federal aid offered to municipalities toward elimination of their slums should notably stimulate private building by accentuating the demand for better housing. Moreover, builders who undertake to provide dwellings for families of moderate incomes will have the active support of the Federal Housing Administration working on an entirely different basis. As pointed out in the address of Stewart McDonald, FHA administrator, there is a wide opportunity for development of rental housing—financed over a long period with reasonable but stable returns—through the mortgage insurance technique.

Apparently the regular session of Congress will be asked to set up more effective machinery to facilitate this promising aspect of the FHA program. That agency has been unnecessarily hampered by vague terms of the act under which it was created, and no effective provision has ever been made to mobilize the capital needed to make its program effective.

Some other factors emphasized at the conference are less encouraging. Building is undoubtedly held in check by the high cost of materials and labor. In both instances there is a persistent and well-reasoned belief that such costs could be lowered by large-scale operations. But that challenge to businessmen and labor unions has not yet been met. President Roosevelt's housing committee, which is presumably preparing a legislative program, will render a service of no less importance if it can point to specific means of reducing these items in the cost of housing.

A Civil Service Inquiry.

Charging favoritism and flagrant discrimination by bureau chiefs in respect to appointments, transfers and disciplining of subordinates, Senator Ellender, of Louisiana, has introduced a resolution calling for an inquiry into the administration of the civil service. No doubt numerous cases of injustice, both deliberate and accidental, would be disclosed by such an investigation. In a system of such extent and complexity as the Government classified services it would be surprising if abuses did not exist.

If Senator Ellender is eager to extirpate discriminatory practices in hiring, firing and promoting Government employes, however, he should not confine his investigation to the civil service groups. Even though these employes are imperfectly protected, they are vastly better off than the political appointees of New Deal agencies who have no civil service status. It is in these latter branches of the Government service that the gross abuses of patronage flourish, since no tests of merit have to be applied and inefficiency is no bar to promotion.

No very exhaustive investigation would be required to demonstrate the need for reforms in the civil service and the unclassified services. It is doubtful, however, whether a senatorial committee of inquiry would have the hardihood to explore one of the major evils of the present system. That grows out of Senatorial efforts to influence appointments and push promotions of their own political favorites. Such tactics are much more serious and destructive of morale than the occasional preferment of a "pretty face" or a personal friend by bureau heads.

What we need much more than facts about existing abuses is a changed attitude on the part of Congress—a reversal of its policy of voting to exclude newly established agencies from the merit system. We also need an extensive reorganization of the Government service to bring all but a few policy-making officials under the protection of civil service rules and regulations. And finally we need reform of the rules to provide real careers for men and women in the Government service, with appointments and promotions based strictly on merit.

Until these basic reforms are secured, abuses of patronage will be almost impossible to eradicate and opportunities for discrimination will abound. The hazards of employment in the protected services are increased at present, moreover, by constant changes in the scope of governmental operations. Spasms of economy succeeding periods of lavish spending lead to extensive hiring and firing. Until a measure of stability is introduced into Government business, the marginal fringe of employes along the firing line will have no security of tenure. Moreover, opportunities for favoritism on the part of superior officials increase with the growth of dismissals.

Employes might be protected against discrimination to some extent by the creation of a civil service appeals board as a court of last resort. But that would not be a panacea. The evils of which Senator Ellender complains are in fact inherent in the system, not a product of bureaucratic caprice. Consequently the remedy lies in an extensive overhauling of that system.

New Use For Ghosts.

"Look forward!" was the original New Deal prescription. A depression was the Nation's problem? Very well; forget old-fashioned ideas and traditional methods, and try some new experiments. Was there unemployment? Put aside local committees and private charity; Federal relief was the new panacea. Was the country suffering from deflation? Drop traditional precautions and watch the latest trick of devaluation.

And if there were any who persisted in looking backward, sighing wistfully perhaps for Jeffersonian Democracy, or Washingtonian stability—why, they were "tories" and "reactionaries" of the "horse and buggy days."

But now the worm has turned. Today the New Deal itself is looking backward. A few days ago, in Charlottesville, the Secretary of Agriculture went back to Thomas Jefferson to establish a precedent for Presidential antagonism toward the Supreme Court. And the next day at Mount Vernon Mr. Wallace read a speech for the President in which George Washington was described as one who "considered agricultural production . . . to be much more than a local matter." The implication is, of course, that the first President would embrace the AAA if he could in some way be called upon to discuss the present agricultural situation.

Having spent five years flogging ghosts, it begins to appear that the New Deal is now selling them on its knee and waggling their jaws a la Bergen.

Futility Of Mediation.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: We may learn a lesson from the failure of the Brussels conference to settle the Sino-Japanese conflict by processes of mediation. Hope that mediation would work was based, I believe, upon a misconception of the real nature of that conflict.

Mediation and other methods of pacific settlement envisage the conflict as a contest concerned with a justiciable issue or, at least, with some specific collision of interest. But the flimsy excuses given for Japanese aggression in China seem to indicate, in the perspective of history, that her real objective is supremacy in Asia. The present campaign in China appears to be part of an intermittent, total war in which that is the issue. In wars where supremacy is the issue, there can be no decision except by the extinction of one of the parties as a power in affairs. For total wars are not justiciable or arbitrable, nor can the issue of supremacy be compromised.

This view of the Japanese advance into Asia is taken by Walter Lippmann in a chapter on the "Wars of a Collectivist World" in his recent book, "The Good Society." He argues that the post-war system of collective security broke down because of the Punic peace dictated at Versailles and because the sponsors of the League of Nations have failed to reduce their privileges in accordance with liberal nineteenth-century preconceptions.

If this interpretation is correct, then neither mediation nor any other measure short of force majeure will settle the Sino-Japanese conflict. GEORGE B. GALLOWAY.
Washington, Nov. 18.

The Unemployment Census.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: As a very humble and obedient citizen, I would like to know just who the President thinks he is. I was formerly among his strongest of supporters, defending him and his policies in innumerable debates. But after his speech on the radio on November 14 it is a wonder that Mr. Farley is still for him.

He (the President) said: "Nothing on these cards will be used against you. I will see to that." Does he hope the unemployed to believe that he is omnipotent and that no one except Mr. Franklin Delano Roosevelt will handle the 14,000,000 cards? If the people fall for that line their intelligence is a lot lower than anyone ever thought.

The unemployment census is a good idea. But will everyone co-operate? It is very doubtful that they will. Therefore the census will turn out to be nothing but a highly inaccurate estimate. And we have plenty of estimates already.

Two Reactions To Maxwell Verdict.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Please let me add a word in regard to the Maxwell case. The injustice of it should be challenged by every right-thinking person in the United States.

Among all my acquaintances—including men as well as women—there is not one person who is not outraged by the decision of the court. To allow such a thing to stand is a disgrace to civilization.

There are evidently a few backwoods people who believe that no decision can be too harsh for a woman. Your paper should be undaunted by the remarks of such hill-billies. It is to be hoped that you keep up the good work that you have undertaken.

If some organization or paper should sponsor a petition to the Governor of Virginia for Miss Maxwell's release, there would be tens of thousands of signatures in a short time. The Governor could not overlook such an appeal for justice.

I have just returned from a trip to California. The people there as well as here and elsewhere feel rightly outraged at such a miscarriage of justice. SALLY JONES.
Washington, Nov. 18.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Adding another suggestion to the two recently appearing in The Post relative to Edith Maxwell, may I suggest that a delegation of some 10,000 sob sisters, feminists and sentimentalists converge upon the executive mansion of the Governor of Virginia. Let them present a demand in no uncertain terms for the immediate and safe release and the revocation of her sentence, regardless of the evidence presented to the judge and jury and that this heroine be promptly and generously reimbursed by the fair State of Virginia for services efficiently done and performed.

There will encourage, help, aid and assist all others of this type of female who have or may have a homicidal inclination or tendency—especially the modern husband killers who accidentally, inadvertently and unintentionally pull the trigger three or four times.

In case the Governor turns a deaf and heartless ear to the frantic and tearful pleading of this delegation of sob sisters, then to take over (by a sit-down strike) the State government, its executives and assistants and replace them all with the sob sisters. Rescue the abused heroine, place a garland of white roses upon her fair head, an olive branch in her guileless hands and return her to the mountain cabin whence she came.

Then, women of the 10,000, you shall have declared yourselves victors over regularly constituted law and order and the courts of justice.
A VIRGINIA GENTLEMAN.
Woodstock, Va., Nov. 16.

Social Justice Concept.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: It may be that "Aristo," whose letter on unlift and slum clearance appeared in The Post of November 11, will find less disagreement with his opinions than he presupposes.

No one wants slums and a potentially criminal group flourishing on the back door step and it is undoubtedly a civic duty to abolish both; but if the past is any criterion of the future, little or nothing can or will be accomplished by the well-meant attempts now being made to reform and "uplift the masses." The only lasting betterment of anyone's economic status must spring from a deeply rooted wish to improve, this being the parent of the will to make that wish come true.

We belong in the place in which the world has put us and would do well to stay there until by our own efforts we can meet the world's conditions for getting out. The fact that so many live out their entire lives under circumstances and in surroundings that to most of us would be intolerable is prima facie evidence that not one in a thousand of them either deserves a better fate or honestly wants it. Whether or not they are happy is something else and is beside the point here.

This idea of social justice may seem to be a harsh one, but is not the criminal waste that goes with the unending support of the basically worthless, who, after all, resent change and make no effort to help themselves, even worse?

The forgotten man usually gets that way because able or willing to contribute nothing to the betterment of our common social heritage, he is seldom worth remembering. It seems hardly just to penalize those who can and do carry their share of the burden without complaint.

Help to the deserving needy just so far as they show that they can permanently profit by it—yes, by all means! But to the lazy, the parasites, and "moocher," whose acts speak for themselves, neither one red in money nor one minute of time except for purposes of self-protection. BOURGEOIS.
Kensington, Md., Nov. 17.

Public And Physicians.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: "What the devil do they want?" complains Dr. Hiden in referring to the HOLC co-operative health plan. He adds, lamely, a note of self-pity about how "we get out at every hour of the night" and "give them all our time."

They want the opportunities for health, of course. They want their children taken care of when they get sick. They fear disease and are in revolt against health costs, which are out of proportion to average income.

They, the people, are not a satanic group, hungering to destroy organized medicine. They do not object to medicine fighting the battles of privilege in the front-line trenches of economics, but they resent its "what the devil do they want" attitude.

A very definite need lies at the root of this problem.

Let us hope that the Government and its health-conscious employes will march on, ever widening the scope of their influence against the tinsel gods of greed that sit on the throne of organized medicine in America. CASH ASHER.

Miss Cross' Ability.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Dr. Ruhland's action with reference to the mural at Glenn Dale is most distressing. He has stepped out of his sphere in condemning to death the work of an artist who has commanded notice and respect for her achievements.

Miss Cross has a real understanding of the child's joy in the fanciful characters of folklore. Her mural, "Pinocchio," has been hung in the Children's Hospital here, and another painting, the "Pied Piper of Hamlin," was acquired at the special request of a local school.

Dr. Ruhland might be an excellent man to pass judgment on a case of the mumps, but if I wanted my child to be healed by the imaginative and delightful experience of Mother Goose, I would call in Miss Cross.

The Post Impressionist

Country Boy.

I FIRST saw Red on the second day of high school. Things were pretty strange for us all then. We didn't know many of each other, coming, as we did, from several different grammar schools, and we didn't know any of the teachers. The routine was hard to understand, too, what, with going from one room to another for the various classes and taking care to obey the traffic regulations that were in force in the corridors. But the strangest thing for most of us to understand was Red Smithers, who had come down from the hills to get himself an education.

I remember the day when he became the outstanding personality among the 145 of us freshmen, because it was also the day when I was first addressed as "Mister." Formally, I mean, not sarcastically. You see, when you got to be a freshman in high school you thought you were quite grown up and I guess the teachers deliberately tried to foster that belief. It probably made for better discipline and less horseplay.

Anyway, I didn't quite live up to the handle they put on my name. The history teacher asked me to describe a Macedonian phalanx. Having neglected to read the day's assignment, I didn't know the answer, but I put up a good, glib bluff, slipping in a wisecrack or two that brought forth guarded, self-conscious chuckles. My wit didn't impress Mr. Alford, though. "All right," he said. "That will do."

Then he looked down through the list of names that teachers always had with new classes and he called "Mr. Smithers?" He put a kind of rising inflection on the end of the name, as if he questioned whether Mr. Smithers was in the class or whether there was such a person anyway. About two minutes later we were all wondering the same thing.

* * * *

Way at the back of the room a bright red patch of hair bobbed a couple of times and a gangling figure heaved to its feet. It was Smithers. I watched with some awe, because he didn't get up all at once, but rather unfolded, like a pocket rule that you can ultimately extend to a preposterous length. There was something unnatural about it.

A few heads were beginning to turn by this time, but they all turned as if swung on a common axis, when Red began to speak.

"Waal," he said nasally, and he pulled himself erect. "Waal," and he began to boom with the resonant conviction of an old-fashioned Fourth of July orator. "A Macedonian phalanx was . . ." and he proceeded to give an accurate, thorough-going description of a Macedonian phalanx, its origin, its military value and how it happened to go out of style.

Before he got even fairly launched on his recitation, of course, the room was alive with giggles and poorly subdued laughter that failed to stop entirely even when Mr. Alford said, "All right, now. Quiet down, please."

Smithers was a phenomenon because he was not afraid to speak right out in meeting.

* * * *

The boys laughed at him because of his accent and of the serious way in which he exhibited his knowledge. The girls laughed because of his accent, his intentness and those dreadful clothes. And both groups laughed because here was something they had never encountered before and therefore did not understand.

I did not laugh as Red's voice crashed unconcernedly above the classroom disturbance. It was wonder, rather than discernment, I think, that kept me from laughter while those harsh consonants and clipped vowels were considering the Macedonian phalanx. Then too, it may have been a trace of the Horatio Alger kind of imagination.

For I could see in that ungainly figure a force that was primitive and yet always new, an intelligence that was 30 years behind ours and yet well able to take that handicap. I had the grammar school history-book idea of Lincoln and unconsciously I found myself drawing a comparison between that gaunt figure and this lanky redhead. Both were poor and thirsty for knowledge and somehow the two seemed to be not far apart in time.

That was the strange part of it all, the time element. Smithers had no right to be standing in that classroom. He had no right to be a contemporary of mine. He was something projected from the past, a crusader who should have been stoned to death a century ago for espousing some unpopular cause.

Yet here he was, with his ambition and his deadly earnestness, declaiming. I looked at him and I could see how that awkwardness might eventually become dignity, that fierceness become power. It was not hard to imagine him, in 20 years, moving a crowd to violent emotion.

"He will be a politician," I thought. "And a pitiless one, too. God help the liberals."

* * * *

Three years ago I was home on vacation from my job in New York, filled with the mercenary drive that Gotham always gives its younger initiates. I saw Red on Main street, his arms loaded with what must have been at least a week's provisions. He was a little thinner, a little older looking, but that prehistoric toughness of his was still apparent.

"Why, I'm still studying," he said when I asked him. "I had to lay off a couple of years to save some money, but I'm going to theological school now. I'm going to be a minister. I think it'll be a pretty good life."

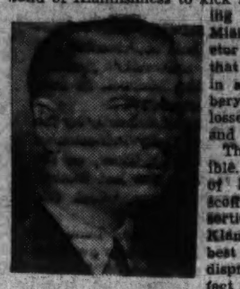
Fair Enough

By Westbrook Pegler

Compromised Miami.

A SUDDEN EXCESS of righteousness recently prompted a band of Justice Black's native white Protestant former brethren in the sacred, unfailing bond of Klannishness to kick in a night club operating on the outskirts of Miami, Fla. The proprietor afterward claimed that the raiders indulged in a little incidental robbery, listing among his losses $350 cash, a $7 watch and seven rifles.



This charge seems plausible. The Grand Dragon of Florida attempted to scoff it away with the assertion that the Miami Klan includes some of the best people in town, which disproves nothing. The fact is such gangs not only here but in Italy and Germany habitually use their patriotic pretense to disguise looting and often are inspired by the personal motives of individual members who may be unsuccessful business rivals of the victim or in debt to him or just plain thieves. Thus the early Black Shirts and Brown Shirts liquidated their competitive problems, compelled the cancellation of their debts by terrorizing their creditors and covered common stickups with a mask of civic duty. Thus, also, the Ku Klux Klan in the days when Mr. Justice Black found fraternity with those who, like burglars, operate by night and, like burglars, go masked.

* * * *

BUT TO COME to an understanding of the situation in Miami and vicinity it is best to eliminate both the charge of larceny against the Klan and the claim that the mob contained the best elements of the community. The fundamental fact is that the best people of Miami for years have not only tolerated but aggressively encouraged the development of a major league underworld in a minor league city for the sake of the money to be made through political graft levied on notorious criminals from New York, Chicago and other big cities and for the incidental business drippings.

The politicians frankly sold concessions for the violation of the laws, and the best people of Miami, mostly retail merchants or real estate promoters, agreed that this was necessary because otherwise the heavy spenders would avoid Miami. Some of the best people of Miami have participated in this system, politically and financially, for 15 years and have watched with pleasure and pride the growth of a system of corruption the like of which will not be found in any city of equal size in the United States. They were pleased because vice brought notoriety and money, which is the only god of the booster, and they were proud because they thought a real city incomplete without an underworld.

And their own underworld was, if not the cream, then the rich, heavy scum of all the underworlds in the country. It was a matter of naive satisfaction to the best people of Miami that such distinguished criminals as Al Capone, Lucky Luciano, Johnny Torrio and Dutch Schultz chose to honor them with their presence and their professional interest, and they saw the creation, on the outskirts of their city, of a town called Hialeah, whose principal industry was graft. Hialeah, from the start, has been a rare political freak, an aggregation of rackets organized into a municipality.

OF ALL THIS the best people of Miami have been well aware, and the system has ramified to such an extent that if the individuals who raided the night club were to unmask and reveal their identity a majority probably could be shown to have had more or less direct personal connection with the corruption of their town. In fact, if they had been clean and had possessed ordinary physical and civic courage it would not have been necessary for them to go raiding or to wear masks. They could have obtained evidence of crookedness sufficient to convict some of their local officeholders on many charges any time they resolved to clean house by legal methods if they had not been afraid to face investigation themselves.

Miami is a city so badly compromised that one of the most notorious racketeers that the country ever produced could go among her best citizens in the guise of a reformer and make another racket of reform. If the former brethren of the backslid Associate Justice of the United States Supreme Court had had any confidence in their own individual reputations under close inspection they would not have been afraid to show their faces at a resort described by the local sheriff as a menace to the community.

Japan's 'Lawrence'

Doihara Returns To China Where His Genius For Manipulation Won Him High Glory During Earlier Manchurian Coup.

By Mark J. Ginsbourg.
Special Correspondence of The Post.

Shanghai.

LIEUT. GEN. KENJI DOIHARA, Asia's "Col. Lawrence," is back in China. He returned to the scene of his earlier exploits in August, at the head of the Sixth Division of the imperial army, to "chastise" the Nanking government for its "insincerity" and to make North China secure for Japanese investors.

Military activity for Gen. Doihara is an unaccustomed task. His major victories were scored over glasses of warm wine in the "yamens" of Chinese warlords and the "yurts" of Mongol princes, in interminable conferences with politicians, in a skillful sifting of a maze of information brought to him by his spies in every corner of China.

At the outbreak of the Sino-Japanese trouble in Manchuria, in September, 1931, Col. Doihara—already known as an authority on matters Chinese — was detached from staff regimental duty and assigned to the post of a diplomatic agent with the Japanese expeditionary force in the war zone.

Making use of his informal manner, his capacity for drinking without getting drunk, his knowledge of China, and the funds placed at his disposal, Col. Doihara soon acquired innumerable friends in the official Chinese circles in Manchuria and North China.

When, in the fall of 1931, the Kwantung army decided to sever Manchuria from China, Col. Doihara, who had already displayed his tact and organizing ability, was intrusted with the task of heading the municipal administration in Mukden, the capital of old Manchuria, and of securing for the new regime a semblance of Chinese popular support.

Later, when the Kwantung army gradually cleared Manchuria of Chinese troops, Col. Doihara took upon himself the task of persuading Chinese officials to form an "independent" government, under the aegis of the Japanese military.

Kidnaping Of Pu Yi Credited To Doihara.

IN 1932, according to reports which, as yet, have no official confirmation, Doihara traveled to Tientsin, and at the risk of his life, smuggled Henry Pu Yi, once an emperor of China, out of the city to Hsinking to become "by the will of our people and gods," the Emperor of Manchukuo.

In reward, Col. Doihara was promoted and put at the head of the Kwantung army's secret service. Doihara rapidly reorganized and expanded the service until it became one of the world's best informed and most powerful espionage organizations.

In its unpretentious headquarters in Mukden, the Special Service Division is reported to have dossiers of everybody who is anybody in Asia. Its secret agents can be found in every town that can be of the slightest interest to the Japanese army—from Stalingrad to Singapore.

It was also Maj. Gen. Doihara who facilitated the work of his secret agents by stationing the so-called special service missions at all strategically important points in North China and Mongolia. These missions did invaluable work for the Kwantung army in collecting political, economic and military data, cultivating friendship, fomenting anti-Nanking movement and directing the activities of hordes of secret agents.

Doihara's informers were recruited from every possible stratum of society—from government leaders in Nanking to prostitutes in the bars of Shanghai, Hongkong and Singapore. Through them, Doihara constantly had his finger on the political pulse of the entire continent. It was only natural that with this knowledge, and with his ability and ambition, he became one of the Kwantung army's policy-makers, forming with three or four other officers a "brain trust" that actually molded Japan's imperial policies.

North China Assignment Well Suited His Talents.

HIS ASSIGNMENT to add the North China jewel to the Japanese crown three years ago, Doihara accepted with delight.

Soon his mysterious dashes from one end of China to another and his secret interviews with retired Chinese politicians, warlords and Mongolian princes began to draw general attention. Wherever he traveled, Doihara left in his wake political unrest, antigovernment intrigues, often an open rebellion. Mongol princes, aspiring to regain the glory of Genghis Khan, were supplied with funds and arms. Scores of senile statesmen and repacious warlords temporarily out of office were encouraged to work for autonomy, where lucrative jobs would be available to all worthy men.

Armies of ne'er-do-wells were hired at 10 cents a day to parade in the streets and express "popular" dissatisfaction with the Nanking government. Hundreds of similarly discontented farmers, suitably guided, actually staged riots that led to the establishment of an autonomous pro-Japanese administration near Peiping.

But Maj. Gen. Doihara's dreams were even more ambitious. They embraced the sight of an independent kingdom in Inner Mongolia, under the aegis of the Japanese army, and an independent area including the provinces of Hopei, Shansi and Shantung, with similar moral support.

The former was to be founded by Prince Teh, an ambitious Mongol willing to entertain Doihara's advances; the latter was to be governed by a Chinese administration ready to "co-operate" with Japan and Manchukuo, to sever relations with Nanking, and to stamp its approval on plans drafted by Doihara and his aides.

It was here that Maj. Gen. Doihara suffered the first defeat of his career. Under his carefully prepared scheme, which he worked out in personal conferences with his prospective Chinese collaborators the war lord of each of the three northern provinces was to come to Peiping and at a solemn conclave solemnly denounce the Nanking government and communism and announce his heartfelt desire for autonomy and friendship with Japan.

But one of the Chinese generals simply disappeared. Another had a severe attack of political influenza and was obliged to enter a hospital in Paotingfu. Gen. Han Fu-chu retained his health, but was prevented from flying from Tsinan to Peiping by a heavy fog. The adverse atmospheric conditions lasted the duration of Gen. Doihara's stay in the ancient capital.

Installed Japanese Influence Over North China.

IN HIS two years of feverish but largely secret activity in North China Gen. Doihara succeeded in securing for Japan a foothold in the immensely important Peiping-Tientsin area, in creating two puppet regimes, and in extending Japan's influence over the five northern provinces of China.

These achievements Gen. Doihara made by entirely peaceful, if not always graceful, methods. Using the minute information supplied by thousands of his agents freely sprinkled over the map of China, he distributed bribes, threatened, cajoled and played on men's ambitions.

But with his success grew his popularity with the ever-dangerous "younger officers" of the Kwantung army, who constantly dream of new worlds to conquer. Gen. Doihara was becoming bigger than the Kwantung army and the Japanese government itself. The War Office was alarmed.

In March, 1936, soon after a group of "younger officers" staged a three-day mutiny in the shadow of the Imperial Palace in Tokyo, Maj. Gen. Doihara was made a lieutenant general and recalled to Tokyo, to be attached to the staff of the First Division, whose men were in Manchuria.

Soon afterwards he was appointed commander of the Sixth Division, stationed in the hinterland, where the War Office thought he could do no harm. In this virtual exile this able and ambitious man remained for a year, until the war in China gave him his chance.

Significantly, Gen. Doihara was dispatched to the area of his earlier exploits. This, perhaps, is an indication that the army intends to make full use of Gen. Doihara's talents as a plotter de luxe as soon as the military campaign in North China is completed and time comes to set up a new pro-Japanese administration.

When that moment comes Gen. Doihara is bound to be in the background of the North China politics, helping in the creation of a Mongol kingdom, establishing an autonomous administration in the northern provinces, enlisting the support of influential Chinese and manufacturing "public opinion."

Years hence, when time comes to write the history of Japan's imperial conquests, Gen. Doihara will cast a heavy shadow over the chapters dealing with Manchuria, Mongolia and North China.

New Convert

By Barnet Nover.

Great Britain And Mr. Hull.

PROTECTIONISM, coupled with imperial preference, has been a family tradition among the Chamberlains—Joe, Austen and Neville.

Joseph Chamberlain, father of the present British prime minister, was one of the first British statesmen to denounce the system of free trade which Conservative and Liberal governments alike had supported for a long time. But while he succeeded in winning over his party he failed to convert the nation. His plan of tariff reform was overwhelmingly repudiated at the polls in the election of 1906.

Nonetheless, the seed which Joe Chamberlain planted in the British consciousness sprouted in good time, first in the dominions and a few years ago in Great Britain which, following the establishment of the National government, turned its back on free trade in favor of a system of protectionism modified only by imperial preference.

* * * *

IT WAS a revolutionary development and it had its important consequences both for Great Britain and for the rest of the world. Unquestionably it gave an impetus to industry and agriculture in the United Kingdom and, together with the Ottawa agreements, tended to increase the flow of trade within the British empire. But it also meant the erection of additional obstacles to international trade and in general gave an added impetus to the forces of economic nationalism already powerful in the world.

The extremes of that philosophy are now to be encountered in Germany and Italy, with Japan, because of war conditions, moving in the same direction. And it is more than a coincidence that these nations are also the ones which, more than any other, threaten the peace of the world.

But now, a British government headed by a member of the Chamberlain family, Neville, has begun to display a readiness to stage a partial retreat from the move made in 1932. After preliminary explorations lasting many months, it has agreed to undertake negotiations for a most-favored-nation reciprocal trade agreement with the United States.

* * * *

IT IS NOT to be supposed, of course, that the barrier of tariffs built around Great Britain during the past five years will in consequence be lowered to any considerable degree. They will not. Nor can one presume that any major breach is now to be made in our own tariff walls. Such a presumption does not hold water.

Insofar as any concessions will be made in such a reciproval trade agreement by either side these concessions are, for the most part, likely to be relatively minor in themselves and important only prospectively rather than actually. But it is nonetheless of possibly far-reaching importance that the British government should have agreed to make at this time a gesture in favor of freer world trade and that it should have chosen a reciprocal agreement with the United States as the way to do so.

* * * *

THOSE WHO view all international relations as a series of plots and counterplots have a simple explanation for Great Britain's action. They say it represents a new phase of the old British conspiracy to entangle Uncle Sam in the web spun by the masters of intrigue at London.

Mr. Chamberlain and his colleagues, they say, plan to buy American good will with trade concessions so as to lure the United States into pulling Britain's scorched chestnuts out of the fire.

But such explanations are both too simple and too one-sided. In the first place, they ignore the fact that any major improvement in world trade, however achieved, would be enormously to Great Britain's advantage as the nation par excellence which depends on foreign trade for its livelihood.

If protectionism has tended to increase the importance to British manufacturers of the British market it has not solved the problem of what is to be done with the surplus produced by British factories. That surplus must still be sold abroad; nor are the dominions prepared to absorb more than a part of it. In other words, protectionism plus imperial preference may be all right for Great Britain so far as they go, but they do not go far enough. And now with the internal boom in Great Britain showing signs of slackening, foreign trade is more important to Great Britain than ever.

* * * *

WHERE IS THAT additional trade to be found? The United States is, of course, a vast potential market and Great Britain buys from us far more than she sells to us. But Mr. Chamberlain and his colleagues are under no illusions as to the possible increase in exports to the United States that could be made possible immediately by any reciprocal agreement likely to be drawn up. They know the howl that will go up in this country when the suggestion is advanced that the present American duty on this or that British-produced commodity is lowered.

However, if Great Britain, like the United States, is to expand its foreign trade the only way effectively to achieve it is through a lowering and removal of existing barriers wherever they may be. And the most comprehensive program yet advanced to bring that desideratum about is that which bears the name of Secretary Hull.

Britain's present readiness to negotiate a reciprocal trade pact with the United States represents only the latest—if the most important—breach in its protectionist wall. It has already manifested the same attitude on several other occasions during recent months. The trade agreement with the Argentine—one of Britain's best customers—was one such indication, and the readiness shown by the London government to interpose no obstacles in the way of the Oslo agreement of Scandinavian powers, the Netherlands, Belgium and Finland was another.

If present world tensions are to be eased, some attempt must be made to cure the economic malaise which is at the bottom of so many of these tensions. And there is no better way of doing it than by freeing world trade from its present fetters.

* * * *

THERE IS, of course, no hard and fast line in the world of today between economics and politics. The existing tensions in the international sphere are partly economic in origin and have economic consequences as well. Similarly, political considerations sometimes dominate economic thought.

The threat of war which comes from the side of the totalitarian dictatorships has unquestionably tended to draw the democratic nations closer together. They see their common beliefs challenged, their common interests threatened. In the political sphere, joint action between them is difficult. Old attitudes, lingering suspicions, above all an unjustified fear that such joint action would lead to military adventures, stand in the way. But the lever of economic action remains. But that lever happens to be one which if properly applied may be of Archimedean proportions, capable of moving the world.

Tom McCarthy

"Chicken Raffle" In The Adirondacks.

TOM McCARTHY.

I DON'T know exactly why, but I'm getting downright nostalgic. Around here, there's nothing but Thanksgiving and then Christmas. Of course, if you go over to Virginia, you can find possum hunting to make you realize the time of the year. But right here in Washington there's nothing to really get excited about.

Of course, I'm not thinking in terms of such things as the opening of Congress. Frankly, I'm thinking about "chicken raffles." But I guess such things are simply out. They're scarcely urban and then, too, we don't have the cold winters here in Washington despite the fact that you may be shivering right at this moment.

Winters are cold in the Lake Champlain region of New York and even colder, back through the Adirondacks. When the temperature drops to forty below, you're quite willing to call it cold and spend as much time as possible by the fire. And, if money isn't loose you're not willing to buy feed to keep a coop full of chickens through such a winter.

That, at least, was the theory behind the "chicken raffle." Whether or not it was entirely supported by the facts, I don't know. At least, it sounded reasonable.

So, every fall, when the cold winds swept across Lake Champlain from Canada and snow began to brighten the gray peaks of the mountains, the "chicken raffle" would arise like a Phoenix, endowed with an enthusiasm which repetition could never dull.

The invitation to attend would be entirely informal. You merely would be told that there was to be a "chicken raffle" at Varin's place or Couici's place. And the price of admission might be mentioned in the invitation. Rarely was the charge as much as a quarter and, normally, 15 cents or even a dime was sufficient.

Ostensibly, the purpose of holding the raffle was to get rid of the chickens. And the avowed purpose of those attending the raffle was to obtain said chickens. But the spirit of the farmers and laborers as their flivvers jounced through the mountains toward the appointed house was buoyed by more than the thought of the lucky winner's bountiful table.

The chickens were, after all, merely the excuse for the gathering. And the farmer who attempted to do nothing but raffle chickens would soon have found himself a pariah among his neighbors. In the first place, he had to see that at least one musician was in attendance. If others came to the raffle and expressed a willingness to play, well, that was merely a fortunate bounty.

Important in the list of necessaries, he had to include a limitless supply of apple cider. If the guests brought along their own refreshments, that was simply so much more to the good. And his house must be cleared for dancing and the pot-bellied stove kept well stocked with fuel.

* * * *

THE DARK comes early in the Adirondacks and the raffle might be well under way by 8 o'clock. With music bouncing from either wall and, in the light of oil lanterns or kerosene lamps, the party would progress from early dignity to fluid merriment.

In between the dances, chickens would be raffled, but not often enough to break up the fun. Cider would be gulped from tin dippers and the floor of the weathered farmhouse would tremble to the increasing crash of thick-soled boots.

Farm girls in two dollar "silk dresses," bought in Plattsburg, would swing on the arms of dark-skinned French-Canadians, whose laughter roared out above the music.

Dry-washing his hands in the corner, the mustached old French-Canadian holding the raffle would smilingly survey his guests, and compute the profit.

Back in the kitchen the old men gathered about the cider barrel would discuss the youngsters in the front room with many a doleful shake of the head and occasionally a chuckle.

All through the house there would be the babel of French and English, both bearing the marks of the warring accents.

At the conclusion of the evening, the grand prize . . . possibly a dozen chickens . . . would be raffled. But this did not always go off without eventuality. It was the night at Louis Betollete's that the jokers really had their innings.

The chickens had been raffled and the proud winner awaited his prize. Then, the host of the evening came through the door muttering deadly French curses. He set the crate before his guests. And a roar of laughter went up. The prize chickens were gone. And the crate had been stuffed with dead crows!

As usual, when such unlooked for incidents occurred, the blame was charged to a mythical French-Canadian whom, if memory serves, was called Pierre. He was always held responsible for the practical jokes which so often varied the routine of the "chicken raffles."

When I first heard of Pierre, it was in relation to his prodigious strength. I was told how, unassisted, he had carried away a barrel of cider . . . weighing 500 pounds!

At the time, thinking Pierre was a very real person, I asked the grinning French-Canadians how they knew the barrel had been carried away by one man, without assistance.

"There were the tracks," they told me. "The tracks of one man. And they were deep tracks because of the load on his shoulders."

"How deep?"

"The tracks were knee deep . . . in the concrete road!"

RFC to Finance Mass Building Of Residences

U. S. Agency Ready to Match Private Capital; Law Change Sought.

By the Associated Press.

The Reconstruction Finance Corporation, it was learned yesterday, is prepared to invest dollar for dollar with private business interests in giant home-building and financing associations.

These associations would be authorized to sell bonds or debentures guaranteed by the Federal Housing Administration to raise additional millions for mass production of low-rent homes and apartments.

The R. F. C. proposal involves modification by Congress of legislation passed several years ago, authorizing establishment of national mortgage associations. None has been formed. The new legislation would be designed in part to overcome private capital's objections to going into them.

It would permit the associations to sell securities up to 20 times the amount of their capital, instead of up to 15 times, as now provided.

In addition, the new legislation, introduced in the closing days of the last Congress, would clarify the associations' power to carry out large-scale projects of their own as well as to buy mortgages on projects undertaken by others.

Meanwhile Secretary Roper said yesterday the housing industry needs to develop the mass production technique that has made other branches of American industry the most efficient in the world.

Mass production, he told the National Appraisal Forum, would cut costs, and labor might accept lower hourly wages in return for larger yearly earnings.

Interest Cut Urged.

Pittsburgh, Nov. 19 (AP).—Representative Ellenbogen (Democrat), Pennsylvania, said in a radio address last night the interest rates charged by the Home Owners Loan Corporation were "dragging the home owner deeper and deeper into debts."

He urged adoption of his bill to cut the rate on home loan mortgages from the "5 and 6 per cent now being charged to 3½ per cent and to spread payment over 20 years instead of the 10 and 15 now provided."

Will Lease U. S. Projects.

By the Associated Press.

Cleveland, Nov. 19.—Nathan Straus, U. S. Housing Authority Administrator, announced tonight "it is my determination to lease the socalled Federal projects, which the Authority inherited from the PWA housing division, to local housing authorities as quickly as possible." Register Omits Mrs. Roosevelt in Colony Club List

New York, Nov. 19 (AP).—The Colony Club, Park avenue's top-ranking club for women, is no longer listed among Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt's affiliations.

The 1938 edition of the Social Register omits the Colony after Mrs. Roosevelt's name, but the club "never speaks of its members." Nor was explanation available at the Social Register.

The book also omits the Knickerbocker from President Roosevelt's clubs. The Knickerbocker is ultra-conservative and, like the Colony, offered no comment.

2% Tax on Sales Is Majority Choice Of D.C. Taxpayers

A 2 per cent District sales tax is preferred to any other type revenue measure by members of the Washington Taxpayers Association, Rufus S. Lusk, president, stated yesterday in a letter to Maj. Daniel J. Donovan, chairman of the Commissioners' special tax committee.

Of the 74 members of the association who wrote to Lusk, 56 favored the sales tax, 12 preferred the income tax and 6 wanted the beer-cigarettes tax. Second choice of 18 members was the beer-cigarette tax. Four wanted to retain the gross receipt tax, one favored a higher utility tax and many picked on the gas tax.

Records Sought By Committee Are 'on Tour'

By the Associated Press.

Senate investigators heard yesterday that records they had subpenaed from the Constitutional Education League of New Haven, Conn., were in an automobile touring the Mid-West.

Chester A. Hanson, secretary-treasurer of the league, told the Civil Liberties Committee Joseph P. Kamp, chairman of the league, had gone on a Western trip last Sunday, taking the records to "see what's in them."

Hanson was ordered to appear with documents for a study of "various employer associations."

Lawrence W. Campbell, secretary of the Johnstown (Pa.) Citizens Committee, testified the committee was a "voluntary assemblage of citizens" to meet the "emergency" of the June steel strike.

Some records which the committee had asked for were "immaterial," Campbell said, explaining failure to produce them.

TVA's Publicity 'Is Irrelevant' In Power Suit

3 U. S. Judges Hold Statements Have No Bearing on Validity of Act.

By the United Press.

Chattanooga, Tenn., Nov. 19.—Private power companies today suffered the fourth setback in their challenge of constitutionality of the Tennessee Valley Authority before three Federal judges.

The court ruled that "that evidence of speeches, releases to papers, circulars and statements of a similar nature made by the directors or employes of the Tennessee Valley Authority is incompetent and irrelevant."

Judge Florence E. Allen asked Raymond T. Jackson, chief of utility counsel, whether the issues in the present case were the same as issues in the case in which the United States Supreme Court upheld the Government's authority to sell power generated at Wilson Dam, Ala.

Judge Allen, a middle-aged woman with brown, bobbed hair, leaned across the bench to ask:

"Are not these the issues in the case?"

"First, is the statute (creating TVA) constitutional on its face?

"Second, are the acts conceded (performed by TVA)—erection of dams and transmission lines and sale of power, etc., in the purview of the statute?

"Or are the facts what Mr. Morgan or Mr. Lilienthal (TVA director) said about it?"

Jackson replied with the contention that the TVA policies, as expressed by the directors, constituted a basis for the fear of the utilities that the Federal agency "will destroy them."

The issues, as expressed in Judge Allen's questions, are the ones upon which TVA attorneys persistently have contended the case should be decided and the ones upon which the Supreme Court upheld the Government in the Wilson dam controversy.

About the Town

With Dudley Harmon

ETHEL BARRYMORE'S famous personality and equally famous voice are just as thrilling at close range as they are in the fifth row of the third balcony. Yesterday we discovered this when he had the great pleasure of meeting the star at a small tea given in her honor by her cousin, Mrs. Horace Peters, the former Edith Colt.

Miss Barrymore sat the entire time in a big chair in the living room as everybody waited his or her turn to be introduced. Of course, when our turn came we could naturally not think of anything bright to ask her, but she did say that the thoroughly enjoyed being back in harness again after an absence of several years from the stage. She also remarked that she never went to the movies—not even to see "The Royal Family," which is supposed to portray the Barrymores—unless it was a picture in which her brother, Lionel Barrymore, played a part.

* * * *

AMONG THE 10 or 12 guests who had the good luck to meet the great lady were Mrs. Harry Kerr, Mrs. Walter White, Elsie Ekengren and Laura Tuckerman, who poured tea during the afternoon; Mrs. Emory Sands, looking very smart; Eugene O'Dunne, Mrs. Charles Darlington, Miss Maude Converse, Mrs. Francis DeWolfe and Mr. DeWolfe, who is a first cousin of Miss Barrymore's former husband, Russell Colt.

Another great center of attraction at the party was Dudley Digges, Miss Barrymore's leading man in the play. Not having been able to chat with him much, we can only report that he uses a cigarette holder.

Oh, yes—Miss Barrymore wore a black frock with a tightfitting jacket of Persian lamb with a silver fox collar, and a velvet hat with a small brim and a veil.

* * * *

THE CARS WERE parked two-deep for blocks around 2220 Massachusetts avenue yesterday for the party which Maj. and Mrs. David Barry gave for his daughter, Miss Alice Barry. So many were the guests that it was something like a White House reception in that there was a long line reaching from the upstairs hall all the way downstairs.

The debutante looked lovely in a gown of ice blue satin, made with a square neckline, with which she wore a small string of pearls and a corsage of gardenias. Mrs. Barry chose a fuchsia-colored frock with which she wore a magnificent corsage of white orchids with purple tips.

The Barry home formerly was occupied by the Edward Reeds—he is now counselor of the American Embassy in Rome. The rooms on the second floor are tinted a pale green shade, with which the draped yellow curtains are most effective. The debutante and Mrs. Barry received before a background of yellow and orange chrysanthemums, which were literally massed against the wall of the upstairs living room.

* * * *

TO NAME ALL the guests would take a whole page—so, just to mention a few, we saw Mrs. Newbold Noyes, Mrs. Wallach Merriam, who poured tea for a while; Mr. and Mrs. Carroll Morgan and Mr. and Mrs. Dudley Morgan; Eleanor Exnicios; Mrs. Charles Bradley, whose daughter, Barbara, was among the debutantes assisting; Joshua Evans; Mr. and Mrs. Harry Meem, with their debutante daughters, the Misses Ann and Eleanor Meem; Mrs. Merchant Mahoney and Miss Peggy Mahoney; Mr. and Mrs. Charles Wilson; Mrs. Alexander Legare, Count Fumasoni Biondi; Commander Jerauld Wiltse, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Bradley, jr., Miss Gertrude Pierson, Mr. and Mrs. Sevellon Brown, the William MacCrackens, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Joyce and Mrs. R. H. Dunlap.

Norway's No. 1 Woman Is National Party Guest

Mrs. Betzy Kjelsberg, Pioneer Equal Rights Leader and Vice President of International Council, Tells of Work.

By Jessie Ash Arndt,
The Post Club Editor.

Mrs. Betzy Kjelsberg, president of the Norwegian Council of Women, vice president of the International Council of Women and conceded to be the outstanding woman of her country, reviewed her long years of work for equal rights at a tea given in her honor yesterday at the headquarters of the National Women's Party. Honored with her was Mme. de Morgenstierne, wife of the Minister of Norway, whose guest she is at the legation.

Mrs. Kjelsberg began her work for equal rights when she was 18 and that has been 55 years ago. Yesterday she displayed with pride a Susan B. Anthony button, given her by the great American equal rights leader in Berlin, in 1904, on the occasion of the meeting there of the International Congress of Women. With it she wore a gold medal given her in recognition of her work by the King of Norway on her fiftieth anniversary and another decoration with which she was knighted by the King on her seventieth birthday.

She spoke with gratification yesterday of the progress of women toward equal rights since the first women's political organization was formed there in 1884. Restrictions have been removed gradually until, in 1930, Norway granted women full suffrage. They have played an active part in elections ever since, she said and have equality with men in all fields except that they are not eligible to serve in the cabinet nor as ambassadors, ministers and high churchmen. She commended this country's minister to Norway, Mrs. J. Borden Harriman, and brought greetings from her in Oslo to her friends in Washington.

Women in Norway may serve as mayors and jurors, they have the same scale of pay in the professions and in business as do men; the same property rights, the same right to make contracts and bring action before the courts. A Norwegian woman retains her nationality when she marries a foreigner as long as she remains in Norway and may reclaim it if she has gone to her husband's country but had obtained a divorce and returned to Norway with her children.

"Our work is not finished until we gain the nationality right as stated in the Montevideo Treaty," Mrs. Kjelsberg asserted, and at once members of the Women's Party spoke up to tell her that Doris Stevens, chairman of the International Commission of Women, who was among the guests, was author of that clause.

Same Problems There as Here

Only last summer the question of restrictions on women as to working hours was brought up, as it was here in labor legislation. A law was proposed which would have prohibited them from working after 9 at night. The women who fish on the west coast protested that herring had to be taken care of when it was brought in; the women who did janitor work at night, the telephone operators and women in many other lines of work which required night duty raised a united voice of protest that such a law would cost them their livelihood, and the measure was defeated.

"With much unemployment throughout the world, we must stand united and firm in keeping the place we have won," said Mrs. Kjelsberg. "It is sad that in Germany there is now no council of women, when that was one of the first four to come in. Although there is no law discriminating against married women, there is a disposition among some employers to dismiss them in order to take on men in their places, and this is one situation on which the National Women's Council of Norway is alert. Just before Mrs. Kjelsberg left, employees were questioned on their stand. Those who sent back polite but evasive answers were questioned again and asked to give a "yes or no" reply.

From here Mrs. Kjelsberg will go to Chicago, continuing a lecture tour which is the purpose of her trip; on to Seattle for Christmas, to Minneapolis and then to California. "There I shall see Sonja Henie, my dear little friend," she said. "Her father and I have gone cycling together many times. He was a member of an association of cyclists to which my husband and I belonged and we all made many trips together."

Dr. Emma Wold Makes Introduction

Mrs. Kjelsberg was introduced yesterday by Dr. Emma Wold, who was United States delegate to the World Conference for the Codification of International Law at the Hague in 1930, and whom she had known since Dr. Wold's visit to Norway.

Among others who attended the tea were Betty Gram-Swing, Mrs. Henry Anson Bates and Mrs. Abbie Scott Baker, former political chairman of the National Woman's Party, and a member of its international committee, Mrs. Baker recently returned from Geneva where she had been for the purpose of working for the proposal before the League of Nations to write the principle of equal rights into the League Covenant. Also present were Miss Ella C. Werner, Miss Ruth Hudnut, Miss Martha Souder, Miss Anita Pollitzer, Helen Hunt West, Miss Mildred Curran and Mrs. Irene Thuli, of San Diego, who is a prominent educator and legislative chairman for the Soroptimist clubs.

Kappa Beta Pi To Hold Dinner TomorrowNight

G. W.'s Nu Chapter of Law Sorority Sets Annual Event for 6:30.

Nu Chapter of Kappa Beta Pi, international legal sorority, will hold its annual formal dinner at the Congressional Club tomorrow night at 6:30.

Honor guests and chapter patrons and patronesses invited to attend include Dean and Mrs. William C. Van Vleck, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph W. Cox, Judge Ellen K. Raedy, Col. and Mrs. Walter C. Clephane, Prof. Charles S. Collier, Prof. James Forrester Davison, Prof. and Mrs. John D. McIntire, Mr. and Mrs. James Kirkland, Mr. and Mrs. August H. Moran, Miss Elizabeth F. Reed, grand dean of Kappa Beta Pi; Miss Helen Goodner, dean of Omicron Chapter, and Miss Fannie Boyls, Eta Chapter, and attorney with the National Labor Relations Board.

Members of Nu Chapter who will participate in the program are Miss Marguerite Rawalt, member of the board of directors; Mrs. Elizabeth M. Cox, dean of Province 2; Miss Helen Newman, law librarian of George Washington University; Mrs. Olive Geiger Faircloth, dean of Eta Alumnae Chapter, and Miss Ruth Cleveland, dean of Nu Chapter. Miss Beatrice A. Celphane, director of the Legal Aid Bureau of the District of Columbia and former president of the Women's Bar Association of the District of Columbia, will act as toastmistress.

Nu chapter of Kappa Beta Pi was installed at George Washington University Law School August 1, 1920, has initiated 126 members and is one of the 47 student chapters of the sorority. There are also eight chartered alumnae chapters. Kappa Beta Pi became a national organization on December 15, 1908, when it received its charter from the State of Illinois, and is the oldest legal sorority in the world. In November, 1933, it attained its international status with the installation of a chapter at Osgoode Hall School of Law in Toronto, which now has over 50 members and was the hostess group for the biennial international convention at the Seigniory Club in the province of Quebec last summer. In June, 1937, Kappa Beta Pi became the first Greek letter organization to install a chapter on the European continent, with the installation of Alpha Omicron chapter at the University of Paris. This chapter now has nearly 100 members.

High scholastic standing is a prime requisite for membership in Kappa Beta Pi, and Nu's members have distinguished themselves in this respect. Five of them, Helen Newman, Elsie Jansen, Marian Phelps Smith, Marguerite Rawalt and Thela Call Tilden, have been elected to membership in the Order of the Coif, honorary legal society. Last year the only women members of the staff of the George Washington Law Review were Ora Marshino and Altha Mae Wheatley, of Nu, and this year Laura Cross, of Nu, is its only woman staff member.

The achievements of the alumnae of Nu Chapter are noteworthy. Judge Sarah Hughes, a charter member, was the first woman judge in Texas, and is now presiding over the Fourteenth District Court in Dallas. Pearl Collier won distinction as the first woman assistant attorney general in Arizona and is now practicing in Phoenix. Anna Hedrick is practicing law in Arlington County, and became the first woman judge in that county when she substituted for her brother, Judge B. M. Hedrick, of the circuit court, while he was on his vacation.

Eleven of the Nu Chapter alumnae are in active practice of law in the District of Columbia. They are Beatrice A. Clephane, Elizabeth M. Cox, Miriam de Haas, Muriel Euliss, Olive Lacy, Catherine McCloskey, Anne Musgrave, Verna Parsons Young, Helen Prentiss Culhane, Marion Schwartz and Etta Taggart.

Nu chapter alumnae fêted as federal attorneys include Miss Mary Connelly, assistant chief of the law division of the solicitor's office, Veterans' Administration; Miss Louise McCarthy, chief counsel, Harrisburg office of the Public Works Administration; Miss Marguerite Rawalt, general counsel's office, Bureau of Internal Revenue; Miss Ruth Tech, judge advocate general's office, Navy Department; Miss Maytee Boylan, mining division, Reconstruction Finance Corporation; Miss Annie Perry Neal, Federal Communications Commission; Miss Mildred Wainwright, National Labor Relations Board; Miss Elizabeth Rountree, Public Works Administration, and Miss Ethel Hodges and Miss Marguerite Moore, adjudicators, Veterans' Administration.

THE ELLEN SPENCER MUSSEY TENT, Daughters of Union Veterans of the Civil War, celebrated veterans' night with an early banquet last night at the Lafayette Hotel—early because of its guests of honor, John M. After the banquet a reception was held at the local headquarters, 1229 New Hampshire avenue.

SOME OF THE GUESTS at the reception of the North Carolina Society Thursday night were "sorta surprised like" when a pretty young girl with black hair and merry black eyes went right up and kissed their guest of honor, Gov. Clyde L. Hoey, "Well, hello there, honey, I'm glad you came," said the Governor as he put his arm around her. She was his attractive young niece, Eleanor Hoey, who is a student at King-Smith School this year.

• • • •

She comes from Shelby and it seems like 'most everybody that helps run the State comes from right around there. Gov. Hoey is a brother-in-law, as you know—or maybe you don't—of former Gov. Max O. Gardner. Mrs. Hoey is Gov. Gardner's sister. Mrs. Gardner is the daughter of the late Judge James Webb, of the superior court, and her uncle is Judge Yates Webb, who for some years was here as a member of Congress.

Both the Governor and former Governor are lawyers and times without number have opposed each other in hard-fought cases, with their respective wives, sister and sister-in-law witnessing the legal battle with mixed emotions.

"THEY SING because they love to sing," describes the Business Women's Music Club of the Y. W. C. A., of which Mrs. R. E. Espy has recently taken over the direction. Every Tuesday evening the group meets at the "Y" for informal singing. No one need have the voice or aspirations of a prima donna nor even have had vocal training. The only qualification is joy in making music. Miss Mae R. Murray is president of the Business and Professional Women's Club and Mrs. Riethel Grim Murphy is accompanist. Mrs. Espy was formerly director of several music groups in Chicago and brings to the club here a background of wide experience.

ALL SOULS' Memorial Episcopal Church—that quaint little church around the corner on Cathedral avenue—is having its annual bazaar December 2 from 3 to 9 p. m. There will be home-cooked delicacies, beautiful embroideries, a fine turkey dinner from 6 to 8, and all the ingredients of a very successful event. Just one things is worrying the church women who are arranging it. All Souls' Unitarian Church is having its bazaar on the same date, and they want to be sure everybody knows there are two All Souls' bazaars—an Episcopal and a Unitarian—on December 2 and not just one.

Mrs. Howell French and Mrs. Raymond Burhen, active members of the committee, went all the way to Manassas yesterday to attend the bazaar in the little country church there, just to see how the neighbors do things.

JOHN AND MARY.

Representatives from the denominations in the Women's Council of the Washington Federation of Churches met with Miss Etta Mai Russell, their juvenile court worker, in her office yesterday afternoon to initiate plans for the alley Christmas trees, which will be an answer to the letter of John and Mary, Mrs. Frank A. Linzel, president of the Woman's Council, with Miss Russell and Mrs. Thomas J. Hewerton, chairman of the juvenile court committee of the council, discussed the program which will be carried out in the alleys this year.

The letter is only one of the many Miss Russell has had from the alley dwellers, who are looking forward to another such Christmas as was taken to them last year by the church women.

Some churches which cannot take care of the tree and program will provide money and the service will be carried out by another group. Many Sunday school classes and church societies have asked for children or families to "adopt" at Christmas, that their giving may be as friend to friend, said Miss Russell. Many individuals have also signified their intention of contributing to the alley Christmas fund.

Each member of the group attending yesterday's meeting, received an outline of the general plan with a Christmas tree sketched on the first typewritten page and within the tree design this message:

"Christmas cheer for you and others. We want to show our love for Christ and for our brothers this Christmas.

"There are around 200 inhabited alleys in Washington where over 8,000 Negroes live today.

"The Woman's Council of the Washington Federation of Churches is sponsoring Community Christmas trees in each of these little hidden communities on Christmas Eve at 5 p. m.

"There will be 18 denominations uniting in this chain of Christmas trees and candle-light story hours.

"Will you and your Sunday school class, your young people's organizations and your missionary circles take one alley each? Visit the home of each person, get children and adults committed to a plan to meet you and your group at a chosen spot in the alley at 5 p. m., Christmas Eve, December 24, 1937, at which time the tree will be lighted, Carols sung and "The Christmas Story" told.

"Your group will furnish the tree and the decorations, plan and carry out your own program.

"For further details call Miss Etta Mai Russell, Juvenile Court Worker, Woman's Council, Washington Federation of Churches.

"This is one of the units in our city-wide plan to prevent delinquency.

"The Washington Post is securing new toys for your alley. When you have made your survey get name, age and sex of each child and mail your findings to Miss Russell, by December 17, so we may order toys for you. You will be notified where and when to come for the toys."

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

Girl Who Married Fine Man, at 17, to Escape Unhappy Home, Now Loves Another; Asks Advice.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: When I was 17 I married a man of 36. That was nine years ago. I didn't marry for love. My home was a very unhappy place and I knew the man would give me everything I didn't have at home and I thought love didn't matter, that friendship was enough. At that time I had never been in love, so I led the man to believe I loved him, and have always made him think so. I'm a good actress, but it shames me to fool a fine man like him.

* * * *

Last summer I met another man. We tried not to fall in love, but I learned that love is something you can't control. He also is a splendid fellow. We are both very unhappy. I love him so much it seems I can't go on living without him. He wants me to get a divorce and marry him. I would feel wretched telling my husband the truth after all these years. He has been so good to me. And yet I can't be happy loving the other man.

* * * *

Would you advise me to go on just as before—giving up the man I love and trying to forget? Or should I tell my husband the truth? I am sure he would give me a divorce, for he has always said he would do anything to make me happy. Please let me have your opinions.
Sincerely, UNHAPPY.

* * * *

What to Believe.

DEAR UNHAPPY: If every marriage was dissolved as a consequence of one partner or the other's meeting, sooner or later on the path of life, some person of the opposite sex who seemed to be a natural affinity, few indeed would be the marriages which survived. Almost every married man or woman has known an experience similar to yours, early or late in his married life; but it is only the undisciplined, wholly selfish minority who make it the prelude to divorce and re-marriage.

In the latest issue of Readers' Digest there is an article entitled, "I Ran Away With My Wife," in which the writer, an average man, tells how he dealt—in such a manner as to save his marriage—with just such a crisis as you are facing. Instead of running off with the other woman, as he was strongly tempted to do, he ran away, instead, with his own wife of several years' standing. In so doing, in courting her with all the ardor he might have lavished on the other woman, he found himself after a time not only in love with her again, but more deeply and satisfyingly than ever before. Indeed, the innovation brought so much that hitherto had been missing into the lives of both, and invested their relationship with such heightened significance, that they have since repeated on several occasions a similar elopement from disturbing elements affecting their marriage. He recommends the practice to others, and I think it very likely it might work in your case.

* * * *

You may not be able to get away for a sojourn in Europe, as that couple did. But if your husband loves you so kindly as to wish only your happiness (so unselfishly that you believe he would give you a divorce if you asked for it) I am sure he would agree to any practicable suggestions you might make for effecting a closer social and emotional relationship.

* * * *

As you say, the existence of a powerful chemical attraction between two personalities may register unbidden; its inception may be something over which one has no control; but one who has an indisputable social and moral obligation—as you have—to place himself outside the circle of its magnetic pull can always do so, if he will. That is exactly what the man did who "ran away with his wife." By voluntarily foscusing his whole attention on his marriage partner, he deliberately evoked a counter-attraction which automatically broke the spell of the first.

* * * *

To have accepted a fine man's completely unselfish devotion and protection over a period of nine years without yielding anything more authentic in return than a convincing imitation of love, is to suggest that you are emotionally sterile and spiritually selfish. Though you married on the premise that friendship was enough, nevertheless, if your heart was human, if you were at all sensitives either to the demands of another's emotional nature or your own, the subsequent sharing of experiences would have caused you, as time went on, either to care for your husband more deeply, or to have developed a pronounced antipathy to him. The fact that your feelings could remain static and neutral suggests that you must held yourself in spirit completely aloof from him during all these years. Naturally, no sturdy reciprocity of devotion could be built. In my opinion, it would be shamefully sharp practice to walk out on him now, with your debt to him completely unpaid, possibly destroying his whole faith in human nature, only because you think you see a better bargain in the offing.

You might tell him, if you like, if you feel that he can bring a mature, compassionate understanding to your dilemma, that you are currently in the thralls of an inexplicable attraction for another man; that it has caused you to believe your feeling for him has been from the first one of friendship rather than bonafide love, and that you would penitently and gratefully appreciate his wise and never-failing co-operation in dealing with the situation. Such a confession might pave the way for a breaking down of whatever spiritual barriers have erstwhile separated you from your husband, might show you what a veritable tower of strength he can be to you in every need. Indeed, you might learn to your surprise that he has known all along you have never really loved him, had supposed you were too much of a little girl to realize it, but had lived in the patient hope you might some day discover that fact for yourself and set about correcting it. I think it would be basest ingratitude, a despicable refusal to face up to your moral and social responsibilities, simply to ask him for a divorce, without giving him a chance to work shoulder to shoulder with you in pulling your marriage safely through this strait.
M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

Children's Froccks No Longer Ruffled

Girls' Dresses Follow Line of Grown-up Gowns.

Paris (U.P.).—There will be no ruffles for smart little girls this fall—at least for school—for Paris designers of children's clothes have used the tailored lines of grown-ups' sports outfits as inspiration for trim little frocks and coats.

But though the family's pride (aged 6 to 12) may start off to school in a tweed that is "just like mother's," she still will be a little girl, for simplicity of line makes the clothes quite definitely child-like. Though they follow adult sports trends, they follow only in spirit, and trim youthfulness is their theme.

Coats are made with back pleats from the waistline to give the skirts a tailored flare, and simple collars trim necklines that button close about the neck. Fur is left for older members of the family and dressy coats are made of soft, colorful woolens, similar in cut to the more sturdy school coats. Bright plaid wools make practical school dresses.

Television Attire—The Latest Fashion Problem

NO. THE YOUNG woman at left hasn't just come in out of the snow. She's wearing the new "star-dust" coiffure, arranged by Antoine for the premiere television fashion show given in New York this week by the National Broadcasting Co. The silver glitter powder with which her curls are sprinkled televised most effectively.

THE FORMAL evening headdress shown below proved to be most successful for television purposes at the fashion showing. It is of pink sequin birds, which provided the necessary glitter, while the contrast was afforded by the coarse black mesh veiling which flares out from the face. It was designed by Saks, Fifth avenue.

Brunettes Best For Television, Show Reveals

Satin and Sequins Are Effective in Costumes.

By Ethel Ehlen.
The Post Fashion Editor.

NEW YORK, Nov. 19.—If you're puzzled about what to wear when you're televised, here are some points to remember:

Satin televises better than silk jersey.

Sequins glitter when photographed by the iconoscope.

Orange is a good reproduction color.

Brunettes show up better than either blondes or red-heads.

All of these facts were proved successfully here this afternoon in the first all-fashion demonstration of RCA television presented by the National Broadcasting Company. It was given in honor of committee members for Fashion Futures, the big fashion event of the year which takes place next Monday night at the Waldorf.

The unique show was presented in five scenes with clothes for daytime, evening, travel-resort wear and the boudoir displayed by living mannequins. Betty Goodwin, NBC fashion editor, supervised the showing and explained about the styling, materials and color schemes as the clothes were televised.

The fashioning of the Antoine "Star Dust" coiffure for evening was an additional feature which created much interest, as did also the applying of special make-up for television. The latter is a golden apricot foundation cream, accented by a reddish brown lipstick.

Lester Gaba, noted designer of store window mannequins, and his famous creation, "Cynthia," were presented in a special scene to demonstrate accessories for formal evenings. Commentators brought out that in the future the newest ideas in clothes, coiffures and complexions may be seen by means of television.

Secrets of Careful Dress, Poise, Important for Vamp

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK.—Do you want to know how to steal the show in any drawing room?

Let Vincente Minnelli, young theatrical producer who has coached scores of stage beauties in Hollywood and New York, tells you how.

First, the way to dress:

Red is a good color for scene-stealing, he says. But a red hat, bag or handkerchief will do you more good than a whole red outfit. Don't wear a red dress unless you think your rival's charms are greater than yours—and then don't wear it often.

Black or white sets a woman off to better advantage. Blue in any shade is sure-fire. Green is a hazard among strangers, for too many men dislike it.

If you want to appear fragile and appealing, wear a dress half a size too large.

Don't wear shoes too small. You can't get them small enough to change the appearance of your foot; they will only make you unhappy and ill-at-ease.

Wear something glittery—a sequins jacket or beaded belt. An audience or group is like a baby. Whatever flashes catches its eye.

Wear a becoming hat, if you want to attract a man.

Slowly, Gracefully.

Now, here are the Minnelli rules for that sweeping-all-before-you entrance:

Walk into a room as if you owned it, with your head held proudly and high. That means an air of self-possession, but not of snobbishness.

Walk slowly and gracefully. If you don't know how, learn by walking around a room and up and down stairs balancing a book on your head. Garbo and Dietrich did it, so you should be willing.

Pause an instant at the door, get your bearings and then go directly to some spot. Never waver.

Be sure your hat, hair and make-up are perfect before you enter. Don't touch them afterward.

After you arrive look pleasant and natural and keep your hands as quiet as possible. Don't pose.

If you have a rival in the room, don't go to an opposite corner. Stand near her and steal her thunder. It will give you more satisfaction.

The Reserves.

If she's as suave and well dressed as you are and you feel the scene slipping from you—here is some extra ammunition:

Stand perfectly still. In a moving group of people, nothing is so compelling as one quiet figure.

Lower your voice. When the others see your conversation partner bending attentively to catch your words, they will think you must be fascinating—even if you are only talking about the weather.

Hold something attractive in your hands—a flower or a compact that catches the light—and let it flash when your rival moves or speaks.

Authority Lists Foot Treatments

New York (AP).—There are four things that help correct foot ailments: Shoes that fit, rest and massage for tired feet, exercise, and—in extreme cases—use of a support.

Miss Catharine Van Rensselaer, physical director at the American Woman's Club in New York, recommends nearly any exercise that involves the feet.

"All the old chromos are good," she says. "Try picking up marbles with your toes or writing with a pencil held between your toes or rolling your feet over a rolling pin, gripping the pin with your toes.

"Foot circling is good, too. Extend your ankle and bend your toes down, in and up as though you were trying to look at the sole of your foot."

A WOMAN'S NEW YORK

By Alice Hughes

New York, Nov. 19.

ONE OF the arguments which rage incessantly among women is over the relative importance of shoes and hats to our mental and spiritual welfare. I always fight on the shoe team, for poorly made or fitted pumps actually hurt us all over, while an old, second-run hat merely lowers our self-esteem in public.

ALICE HUGHES

In fact, George Fitzgerald, one of our leading shoemakers, says that 50 per cent of our ills and 90 per cent of our waspish tempers work upward from the feet. Maybe George's figures are a mite high, but there is no doubt at all that he has something. Of course, if there is one thing our beloved Nation is noted for among ladies all over the world, it is our excellent shoes—and the moment they are off the boat they bolt for the best New York bootery.

Fitzgerald and his partner, Harry Palter, erect two kinds of shoes—one to keep normal feet normal, the other for feet already ruined by bad shoeing and constant pacing on our stone highways, guaranteed to wreck the tootsies of the toughest doughboy. "Never believe a man who says his shoes 'correct' feet," says Fitzgerald. "The best we can do is relieve the pressure and the pain, and leave the rest to Nature." He is obsessed with proper fitting, and has nothing but scornful rage for the people who try to fit all sorts of feet with a few standard lasts.

* * * *

I am one of those agonized souls who suffers from slightly imperfect feet, and I set as much store by my shoeman as I do my dentist—and I fear I visit him more often than I do my fang-fixer. Is there anything more horrible than slipping off the boots during a play and then being unable to squeeze them on again when the curtain falls? No, and that's old stuff to me. I guess we must all learn to watch our feet before our steps, in order to prance gayly through life.

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—I saw Mr. Secretary Morgenthau sitting in the Alvin Theater, and laughing at "I'd Rather Be Right," the lampoon aimed at the present Administration, proving that he is a cabineteer who not only can take it, but like it, too . . .

Elsa Maxwell, the chunky memoir-writer and "party-arranger" de luxe for local "society," is breaking into the younger college crowd by planning the Princeton prom, and Big Stuff should go like a breeze among the clean-cut Men of Old Nassau, as she is a jolly and amusing soul. She'll teach the Ivy Lads a couple, I'll be bound! . . .

* * * *

The perils of fame are peculiarly terrible here. Only the other afternoon a double for John Barrymore appeared in a mighty Fifth avenue general store—and so frantically did the ladies run him up and down the aisles that he bolted into a fitting room in the gents' apparel department and was never seen again. At least, by the ladies. Probably scuttled down a fire escape . . .

Kitty Carlisle, the movie and stage singer and beauty, is wearing an interesting belt these days—red, studded with gilt things, and worn with a navy dress. She tells me it is made from two elegant dog collars and that she got the notion while shopping for neckwear for her Scottie. So buy doggie a couple of collars, girls, and get yourself a nobby waist pincher! . . .

The embattled ladies in the more remote and lonely reaches of our city—oh, and do we have lonely spots on the outskirts!—are going very warlike, owing to the annoying type of male. Led by Mrs. Warren Green, of Flushing, they are asking permission to carry teargas in pencil-sized gadgets, so that they may squirt it at the pestiferous creatures who bother them after dark! Go it, girls, and make 'em cry!

George Washington Hill, the great tobacco man whose cigarette we are urged to reach for instead of, works in a stately office with a cigar-store Indian guarding the door. G. W. Jr. recently told me pridefully that his mother smoked in the days when it was thought very "fast," but that today he is affected very unpleasantly by seeing girls smoke on the street—and I think many men feel the same way. The sidewalk smokers are now commonplace here. Somehow I don't like it much, either—do you? Or am I just hopelessly dated, like coffee?

Today's HEALTH TALK

by Logan Clendening, M. D.

Weather and Health.

The relationship of certain aches, pains, fevers and other symptoms to changes in the weather has long been a matter of discussion among patients, to which doctors have paid very little attention. We have now, however, an enormous treatise on the subject, "The Patient and the Weather," in four volumes, by William F. Peterson (published at Ann Arbor, Mich., by the Edwards Press). Dr. Peterson believes that there is a basis of explanation for the changes that are brought about by damp, cold, etc.

The soldier's old wound which pains him, the paroxysms of asthma that occur at certain times of the year regardless of pollen, catching cold, the flare-up of attacks or arthritis, the headaches that come in hot weather, the winds that bring neuralgia, are not simply vagaries of the mind or superstitions of the individual.

Even in such a case as the Maguire girl who was for so many years in a semi-comatose condition, the fluctuations in the condition were shown to have a definite relation to climatic conditions. There is even described by a physician by the name of Wilson, such a thing as "laryngeal constipation."

The idea suggested here is that these complexes are accompanied by chemical changes in the body induced by external weather conditions. The unstable individual with low capillary blood pressure and "a tendency toward acidity" (the author's words) is more susceptible to meteorological fluctuations. It is not only such things as neuralgic pains and rheumatic pains and asthma, but even the condition of heart and kidney patients fluctuates with the weather changes during the year. Thus there is always a flare-up of heart and kidney troubles in March, the accumulation of the winter cold and dampness.

Patients who can afford it have long since found this out for themselves and seek milder climates during the late winter and early spring months, but at least they may be glad to know that the medical profession no longer thinks they are wasting their money, but are really doing themselves some good.

YOUR FIGURE, MADAME!

Diet and Exercise Have Their Limits in Revising the Figure.

By Ida Jean Kain.

THE AVERAGE reducer expects to diet and exercise one week and be svelte the next, but such is not the case. Figures are not remade in a week.

You must not expect the impossible of diet and exercise, but here is what you can expect: While you are dieting you can lose from one-half pound to two pounds a week, and from one to three inches a month.

Your rate of loss depends not only on your diet but on the amount of excess weight, and, more specifically, on the percentage of soft, flabby fat, which melts more quickly than the too, too solid fat.

Results of a reducing diet also depend upon your previous dietary habits. If you have always exercised some caution, a strict reducing diet will not effect the sudden drop in weight which is generally experienced by the person who has always eaten far too much food. In the case of the person who has recklessly overeaten, the diet represents a more drastic reduction in the food intake, which makes it easy to understand why she loses more weight.

What is not easy to understand is why, on a strict diet, you may fail to lose any weight. This sometimes happens. When no weight loss shows on the scales it is usually because you are storing water as the fat is burned. Your weight is the resultant of two factors—the gain or loss of fatty tissue and the gain or loss of water. If the fat is replaced by its equivalent in water there can, of course, be no registration of weight loss on the scales.

Figures are not made in a week.

Some very interesting experiments on this weight phenomenon have been conducted by Dr. L. H. Newburgh, of the University of Michigan. Dr. Newburgh has shown that failure to lose weight is only a matter of days. If you keep on dieting you will eventually lose, and in all probability your total weight loss will be as great as if you had lost on schedule. The longest period of water retention recorded is 16 days, in which the weight of the reducer remained at a standstill. This period is usually much shorter.

Water retention, by the way, has no connection with water drinking. Be sure to drink eight glasses of water during the day, but try to limit the mealtime liquid to eight ounces.

The average reducer who is not plagued with water retention can expect to lose weight faster at the beginning of her program than later on. As a general rule you may safely expect to lose 10 pounds the first month of your program, eight pounds the second and six pounds the third month. Twenty-five pounds in three months is the most you should lose in that time, and some of you will lose much more gradually.

Two Pounds a Week and 3 Inches a Month Most That Can Be Done.

House Plants for Winter

YES, even those north windows, those dull corners can blossom into beauty. There's an easy-to-grow plant for each spot.

What's the answer to north windows? The clivia miniata and its brilliant orange flowers. Water your plant sparingly, move to a warmer spot if the room goes below 40 degrees and your clivia blooms will be a mid-winter joy, the glossy green leaves a year-round pleasure.

In dull corners—the dracaena. This graceful foliage plant looks handsomer if you don't pamper it. A little water and an occasional leaf-bath are all it asks.

Odd tables? Transform them into little beauty bowers with the exquisite paper white narcissus. Start a batch of bulbs now, start more every few weeks and have continuous blooms until spring.

Set the bulbs in a bowl with enough pebbles or moss to litt two-thirds of each bulb above water. Keep in a cool, dark spot until roots are one inch long.

More tips on easy-to-raise indoor gardens are given in our 40-page booklet, Success With House Plants and Flowers. Vines, bulbs, ferns, flowering plants. How to water, repot, force slips, keep pests away.

Send 15 cents for our booklet, Success With House Plants and Flowers, to The Washington Post, Home Institute, 109 West Nineteenth street, New York, N. Y. Write plainly your name, address, and the name of booklet.

Old Recipes Win Awards In Contest

Virginians Are Successful Contributors in Latest Post Contest.

Miss Milburn's Spoon-bread Recipe Takes First Prize This Week.

By Jean Green.

VIRGINIANS certainly made the last Favorite Recipe Contest a great success. Colorful recipes that date back to colonial days in Virginia were entered. Some of these were copied in the style in which they were originally written and they described the hazardous conditions under which baking was accomplished over the open fire. Other recipes gave proportions for dishes that are enjoyed today in all parts of Virginia.

The variety of recipes were refreshing. There were recipes for sweet potato biscuits, possum pot pie, election cake, Sally Lund salt water cakes, mammy's hoe cakes, tipsy cake (a colonial recipe), beaten biscuits, batter bread, wine syllabub, crackling corn bread, English walnut pickle, molasses pie, short'nin bread, pound cake, and Old Dominion Brunswick stew to mention a few of them. Don't they bring visions of appetite-teasing goodness?

The first prize for spoon corn bread was awarded Miss Corinne M. Milburn, 307 S. St. Asaph street, Alexandria, Va. However, some of the recipes not prize winners, deserve special mention. A Tyler pudding belonging to President Tyler's family and given to the great aunt of Mrs. R. H. Hicks, 4304 Tenth street northeast, at Haymarket, Va., in 1842, was entered. A Scott family recipe, "Ole Virginia Beaten Biscuits," was sent in by Mrs. William Leroy Stone, 1323 Valley place southeast. An eggnog recipe that has been served each Christmas for three generations in her Southern home at Tidewater, Va., was entered by Beulah Rucker, 288 Carroll street, Takoma Park, D. C. An old-fashioned marble cake that comes from her grandmother's bound cookbook was sent in by Mrs. John Hendricks, Shenandoah Junction, W. Va. And Fanny Marshall, of Middleburg, Va., declares that you have never tasted gingerbread until you have eaten black gingerbread made by her old family recipe.

Choosing Winners Difficult.

Choosing winners in the contest was difficult. After much consideration, an old recipe that is still making culinary history was selected. It is an old-fashioned recipe for spoon bread, made with cooked rice and water-ground corn meal. The recipe is the property of Miss Milburn and comes from a very famous old Virginia family living near Berryville, Va. The recipe was given to Miss Milburn as it is first printed below and she has standardized it. The texture of the bread is perfect. It is moist and firm, and I believe you will find this a practical recipe to use frequently on your menus.

Upton Farm Spoon Bread.
(Original Directions.)

Place in baking dish as much white corn meal as you can hold in one hand 2½ times. Beside this put 1 large cup of cooked rice. Break 2 eggs without beating. Over the corn meal pour lard or other shortening the size of 1 large hen's egg which has been heated to boiling point. Add 1½ level teaspoons of salt and 1 level teaspoon of baking powder. Mix thoroughly without beating and thin with sweet milk until as thin as milk itself and bake in a quick oven for 30 minutes.

Adapted Recipe.

1 scant cup white Virginia corn meal
1 large cup of cooked rice
2 eggs
3 level tablespoons of butter, lard, or other shortening
1½ level teaspoon of salt
1 level teaspoon of baking powder
3 cups of sweet milk

Pound Cake Next Best.

The recipe winning the second award was sent in by Mrs. O. O. Atto, Shipman, Va. It is a white pound cake which has been the family wedding cake for generations. In the original recipe the egg whites were whipped with a bundle of peach tree twigs whose outer bark had been carefully removed. In this recipe the same effect is gained by using a silver fork and then adding a few drops of almond extract. If pastry flour is used the flour must be increased or the liquid decreased. It can be made with baking powder and sweet milk, but is never quite as delicious. For a small cake, cut the recipe in half.

White Pound Cake.

12 egg whites
1 pound of butter
2½ cups of sugar
2 level teaspoons of cream of tartar
1 level teaspoon of soda
1 cup of sour cream
½ cup of buttermilk
4 cups of all-purpose flour
1 teaspoon of lemon
1 teaspoon of vanilla
½ teaspoon of almond extract

Beat the egg whites until stiff with wire whip or silver fork. Cream the butter with sugar and add one half of the egg whites. Dissolve the soda in the buttermilk (the cream of tartar should be added to the egg whites as soon as they are frothy). Add the flour which has been sifted several times alternately with the milk, beating well after each addition. Add the flavoring and beat well. Carefully fold in remaining egg whites and pour batter in large well greased tube cake pan. Bake for one hour in a moderate oven. Increase the heat slightly during the last 15 minutes so the cake will be delicately browned all over.

Mountain Apple Butter Wins.

The third award goes to Alice G. Bingham, instructor in home economics, Paris, Va. She writes, "When one talks about Virginia recipes, can one leave out apple butter making as it is done in the mountains?"

Virginia Apple Butter.

3 bbls. peeled and quartered apples
35 pounds of sugar
1 cup of lemon extract
1 cup of cinnamon
½ cup of nutmeg

Set up a large copper kettle out of doors. Have a slow steady fire with plenty of long logs ready. Put 1 pail of water and 3 pails of apples in the kettle to start, then add 1 pail of apples every 10 minutes. Stir constantly with a wooden paddle. When it has become golden brown, add sugar and flavorings and cook another hour. Put in crocks and cover with brown paper.

The fourth award is to Mrs. James Freeland Dunlop, 1800 Key boulevard, Apartment 499, Colonial Village, Va. She writes that this Virginia Salt Rising Bread was served by her mother from her earliest recollection. The recipe has been in the family several generations.

Virgina Salt Rising Bread.

Measure two tablespoons of cornmeal and one tablespoon of flour. Stir into enough boiling milk to make a thin batter. Leave until morning in a warm place. Then add to it 1 pint of lukewarm water with ¼ teaspoon of salt and enough flour to make a stiff batter. Put the bowl containing this batter in a kettle of lukewarm water and keep at an even temperature until it rises (about 3½ hours). When raised take ½ pint of warm water and add ¼ teaspoon of salt and then to the batter, which now should be light, add flour to make a stiff dough. Knead well. Make into loaves, set in a warm place to rise. When raised, bake about one hour in a slow oven.

The fifth award goes to Carolyn Bennett, Leonardtown, Md. She writes, "Martha Washington's own prize recipe was an incomparable pie which she called 'Carmel Pie' and in which she used her green gage plum preserves. If you do not have green gage plums on hand, any preserves can be used."

Carmel Pie.

Cream 1 cup of butter with 1 cup of brown sugar and stir in the yolks of 5 eggs. Add 1 cup of plum preserves, ¼ teaspoon of salt, 1 teaspoon of vanilla. Fold in the beaten egg whites last. Bake in two pastry shells (previously baked) for 45 minutes at 325 degrees.

Sauce of Applebutter Enhances Roast Duck

With the holidays on hand, you'll need a file full of new ideas for dressing up the dishes. Better make a note of this piquant sauce and try it with your next roast goose or duck. You'll be delighted with its elegant flavor.

Soak 1 tablespoon of evaporated horseradish in 3 tablespoons of cold water for 10 minutes. Add to 1 cup of apple butter. Mix well and serve over slices of roast goose or duck. The tart flavor accents its taste.

In Old Virginia Style

MISS Corinne Milburn, 307 S. St. Asaph street, Alexandria, Va., expresses her opinion of Virginia cooking in the poem printed below. She is pictured in her Alexandria home serving the famous Upton Spoon Bread, the first winner in The Post's recipe contest.

Recipe Rhyme

In all the culinary arts
Virginia is a leader,
Though some may smile
And shake their heads.
Now be convinced, dear reader,
If ever a delicacy you wish,
Just try this old Virginia dish.
—Corinne M. Milburn.

Planned Sleep Urged to Make Rest Effective

SLEEP, to be successful, must be planned for in advance. This is the gist of a study on sleep recently made by the Metropolitan Life Insurance Co.

Parents particularly are cautioned to get the child ready for sleep before putting him in bed. Here are some suggestions for sleep preparation for children as given in a bulletin by the company: The evening meal should be simple, nourishing and easy to digest. Don't give the child too much liquid in the evening. The half hour before bedtime should be quiet, free from excitement, matters of discipline or family squabbles. A child going to bed should feel happy, safe and at peace with the world. Give the child a few minutes warning before bedtime so he can come to a stopping place in his game. Have a regular time for putting him to bed each night and don't allow ordinary circumstances to interfere with it.

Also, a child should have a comfortable bed of his own and his night clothes should be loose and attractive. The window should be open and the room made as quiet and dark as possible. A child should never be threatened with the dark or punished by being shut up in a dark place. When saying good night to a child do not seem in too great a hurry to get away. However, don't show too much solicitude.

Adults, too, should plan for sleep in order to lessen the fatigue, nervousness and tenseness that the events of the day often bring.

Preparations to induce sleep for adults as suggested by the bulletin are: Eat a light meal of easily digested food. Restrict or avoid the drinking of fluids after the evening meal. However, a glass of warm milk just before bedtime often is soothing to some people. Take a tepid bath at bedtime in a leisurely manner with the water about 92 to 97 degrees. Avoid hard rubbing with a towel. Soak the feet in warm water or take a hot-water bottle to bed on cold nights if one if bothered with cold feet. Read a nonexciting book in bed until one feels drowsy.

Shops Glutted With Food for Thanksgiving

Special Provisions Are Made Against Shortages This Season.

THANKSGIVING this year will be bigger and better than ever, to judge by the local market offerings. Every shop is making special provision to see that there is no last-minute shortage this year. Turkeys of excellent quality are coming in daily to supply the great demand during the holidays. The price as yet has not been set, but will probably not advance, market observers say. Roasting chickens, ducks and guinea hens are on hand for small dinner parties.

The guinea is a species of turkey and has the taste of pheasant. For kitchenette dinners, special pieces of chicken can be purchased. Whole breasts of chicken basted with butter and broiled golden brown with whole mushrooms make an attractive dish.

Nuts Add to Flavor.

Barrels of chestnuts, gallons of oysters, and baskets of mushrooms insure no lack of material for the stuffing for the holiday turkey. Brazil nuts and pecans also make a bid for fame.

Cranberries, pearl onions, Hubbard squash, pumpkin and other traditional dishes will be available in quantities.

A trip to the market will provide much inspiration for the holiday dinner. Giant snowy white heads of cauliflower, tender Brussels sprouts and broccoli are at their best. There are black-eyed peas, collards, turnip greens and sweet potatoes at all stands.

Red cabbage, rutabagas, turnips and ordinary cabbage add additional variety.

A new shipment of Italian squash has been received from Florida. These are delicious.

Hubbard and acorn squash prices are reasonable. Baked with a filling of country sausage they are delicious. Green beans and peas from Florida and okra from Cuba are on the market, but are fairly high. Rough surfaced Canadian rutabagas and land cress are among the more unusual vegetables. Home grown spinach is of excellent quality.

Apples Lead Among Fruits.

Apples take the lead among harvest fruits. Lady-finger apples a dry mealy variety excellent for eating, are offered. Delicious apples, both red and golden, Jonathan, Stayman Winesaps and Grimes Golden are others. A combination of fruits—such as apples, pears, and bananas—will make an attractive table decoration. Golden persimmons for salad and pudding will add further authenticity to the old-fashioned dinner. The dinner must include nuts. Fresh dates and dried. Black figs make after-dinner tid-bit.

If you are planning on budget dinners before and after Thanksgiving, then you will certainly want to have fish. Many varieties are adapted to baking and broiling. Fresh salmon from the east sea coast, frozen salmon from Seattle, flounders and mackerel from the East Coast, rock fish and croakers from the bay and Carolinas, Norfolk spots, kingfish and trout from the Carolinas are some of the more plentiful varieties.

Smoked Fish Economical.

Smoked fish is economical and delicious. The Potomac herring, smoked by a local concern, is a popular dish. Imported kippers from Aberdeen are not expensive. They are prepared by broiling or frying. They need not be soaked. Several varieties of pickled herring and spiced meats have recently been received.

Before the fall is over be sure to have country pork and sauerkraut. Or home cured corned beef and cabbage. Both dishes are plebeian, but are good and may be obtained at your grocery.

Winter Requires Foods Extra-Rich in Vitamins

"Being well is half the battle," particularly if this statement true during the winter months. But no battle was ever won without some strategic planning in advance. So this month check the menus and review the shopping lists to make sure that vitamin rich foods are occurring regularly on the menus.

Be sure that sufficient milk and fresh vegetables are included daily. Dried fruits are a boon to busy housewives who are conscientious nutritionists. Certain meats, such as liver, sweetbreads and hearts, are high in minerals and are not too expensive for even the low budget menus.

Fruit Finish For Turkey Is Piquant

Apples Team Up With Cranberries in Festive Dish.

Thanksgiving Accessories Should Provide Contrast.

CRANBERRIES and apples are just as important to the success of the Thanksgiving dinner as the turkey. Each of these colorful harvest fruits served in sauce, jelly, relish, salad, or pie, is in its own piquant way a perfect flavor contrast for the tender, succulent bird.

Combining the two fruits in one dish enhances the best virtues of each fruit and the result is a dish of surpassing merit. Apples baked with a stuffing of cranberries is the finishing touch to a perfectly roasted turkey. Chilled and served with piquant dressing, they can be used as a salad.

Cranberries can be used in many ways as a garnish for the bird. Red cranberries can be strung and used in ropes over and around the well-browned turkey as it goes to the table. Frozen cranberry ice or cranberry jelly served with the hot turkey give a pleasing contrast in flavor, texture and temperature.

The way in which cranberries are served is largely a matter of personal preference. It will depend to some extent on whether or not the cook is also hostess and mother. In this case there are double and triple responsibilities, and a dish that can be prepared well in advance is much more practical. Such a dish is the cranberry sauce. This can be made the day before the dinner and left in the refrigerator until serving time.

For a colorful, attractive dish try this tested recipe:

Baked Apples and Cranberries.

6 large, firm, tart apples
Sliced cranberries to make 1½ cups
2-3 cup of sugar
½ cup of water

Wash apples, core without removing the blossom end, and pare from stem end to center. Add sugar to cranberries and mix well. Let stand while apples are being prepared. Place apples in a deep baking dish, fill the cored portion with the cranberry and sugar mixture. To the remaining mixture add water and pour over the fruit. Cover and bake until apples are tender in a moderate oven (375 degrees). Baste apples occassianally during baking. The apples will become a delicate pink color.

An up-to-the-minute uncooked relish that can be prepared in a very few minutes combines raw cranberries, apples and sugar.

Apple Cranberry Relish.

2 large apples
1 cup of sugar
1 pound of raw cranberries

Grind the washed cranberries with the peeled and cored apples. Add the sugar. Chill and serve as a relish with slices of turkey.

A relish that gained recognition last years is repeated by request. The relish can be made in advance and kept in the refrigerator for several days before using.

Uncooked Cranberry Sauce.

1 quart of cranberries
2 cups of sugar
1 small orange or ½ a large one

Grind the washed cranberries and the orange. Mix together and add the sugar. Place in the refrigerator and chill thoroughly. Excellent for emergency meals and midnight suppers with cold sliced turkey.

The combination of mince meat and cranberries is also traditional. The Indians in New England first taught the Pilgrims how to use the cranberries in cooking. They mixed the tart red berries with dried meats, fats and pumpkin pulp. Later the Pilgrims used them in seasoning the mince meat pies, the traditional fall dish in England. This recipe is a modernized version of an old recipe. The mince meat used comes packaged. In this way the hours spent chopping fruits and blending spices for the old-fashioned mince meat is eliminated.

Cranberry Mince Meat Pie.

1 package of dry mince meat
1½ cups of water
1½ cups of cooked sweetened cranberries
Pie crust

Break the mince meat into pieces. Add water. Place over heat and stir until the lumps are thoroughly broken up. Bring to a brisk boil. Continue boil for three minutes. Allow to cool.

Combine the cooked, sweetened cranberries with the mince meat. Line a 9-inch pie plate with pastry made from your favorite recipe. Pour in the filling and top with half-inch strips of pastry arranged in lattice fashion. Bake for 35 minutes in a hot oven (400 degrees).

Plums Often Used To Garnish Salads

2 Types, Yellow and Green Gage, Are Available.

The canned plums on the market are of two varieties. The most commonly used is the egg or yellow plum and the green gage variety. The egg plum or yellow egg as they often are called are quite large and have a tart flavor.

The green gage is among the oldest fruits recorded. It is believed that they came from Armenia and were introduced into France between 1494 and 1547. They were first given name of Reine Claude in honor of Queen Claude, wife of Francis I. Later when introduced into England the name was changed to green gage.

Recently Oregon plums fresh packed have been marketed under the label of Italian plums or DeLuxe plums.

The plums can be used in dessert or in salad. A popular fruit combination is plums with whole canned apricots, pear halves, and white cherries. The plums are excellent to garnish fish salads or vegetable salads. They can be stuffed with cottage cheese or ripe olives and used on the meat platter.

Apples Stuffed With Cranberries

Two harvest fruits, the tart apple and the piquant cranberry, join hands in a baking dish and step out in blushing unison to make a colorful border for h is majesty, the Thanksgiving turkey. The dish transforms a plain piece de resistance into a banquet dish.

Rich Fruit Cake Features Recipe Contest of Post

Christmas baking begins before Thanksgiving. The fruit cake must be made in advance if it is to age properly. A rich cake combining all the Yuletide flavors already may be on your shelf awaiting the festive day. This cake is the answer during the holidays for special gifts and for informal entertaining.

Fruit cakes are of many kinds. The old-fashioned recipes needed months for the full flavor of the combined nuts, fruits, and spices to develop. Many cakes now can be cut a few weeks after they are baked.

What is your favorite fruit cake recipe? The Washington Post this week offers five cash prizes. Any recipe that you have for Christmas cake is eligible. The first prize of $3 is for a rich gift fruit cake recipe, the second prize of $2 is for an economical fruit cake recipe that is well flavored and suitable for average use, but not elegant enough for gift purposes. There are three additional prizes of $1 each.

To win, write out your recipe clearly, inclosing your name and address, and mail to Miss Jean Green, Post Food Editor, before November 27

PLEASANT HOMES

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin.

EVER stop to think how important the sink is to your disposition? It's about the most used piece of equipment you own, so it's a good idea to consider how to get greatest convenience from it.

As the most important work center in the room, it should have double the window provides light, fresh air and that view that makes your outlook wider and brighter. The sink should be approximately 36 inches from the floor to work top. This height, however, depends on your own height . . . be sure it's placed so you won't have to bend your back in working. If you can't have the sink unit under a window, have a good, nonglaring light installed ble drainboards to give you extra working surface. It should be located, if possible, under a window along the longest outside wall. This long wall allows for a maximum of storage space near the sink. And over the sink. Investigate the new nonapron type of cabinet sink, for these give you actually 35 per cent more work spoce. If your family is large and much time is spent doing dishes, look into the question of electric dish washers. If you want one but can't get it at the time you remodel, be sure that you make allowances for installing it later. Before investing in a washer, make sure that your hot-water supply is suitable. If you have copious quantities of very hot water, you'll get your money's worth from the dish washer. If your water-heating equipment isn't always generous or is usually "just warm" you won't.

Have your sink equipped with a cup strainer, now available in many types of sinks. Then throw away your old dish pan and wash dishes directly in the sink without having to use rubber stoppers. Crumbs and the like collect in the cup strainer and can be easily disposed of. Also look into the new garbage disposal drains for your sink . . . that is a real step forward in housewifery!

Italian Cafe to Offer Dishes a la Rossini

Paris.—When the International Exposition reopens here next spring, one of its features is expected to be the Italian Cafe, according to Arthur Dobson, manager of the American Express Travel Service, who reports that among the most popular dishes served in it last summer were those of the musician Rossini. When Rossini ended his career as a composer, he turned to creating new recipes. His dishes were received with warm approval by the gourmets of London, Milan and Paris, and proved still popular this year on the menus of the Italian cafe at the exposition.

Milk Provides Most Calcium For Daily Diet

Broccoli Also Is High in Furnishing Needed Mineral Salt.

By The Post Food Editor.

DIETS this year are stressing high mineral content. One of the more important minerals that is apt to be lacking in the average dietary is calcium. This mineral, which is so necessary for bone building and normal calcification, can be taken on doctor's prescription, but to the menu planner a knowledge of how to provide needs adequately by diet is more important.

What are the more important sources of this mineral? Milk, of course, heads the list but there are several foods that can be depended on to furnish a goodly amount. Many vegetables are high in calcium. Broccoli is one of them. Careful research has shown that there are 137 milligrams in a serving of broccoli. This, to those in the know, rates it as one of the best. Spinach, rutabagas and hubbard squash have about this much. Parsnips, string beans and beets come next on the vegetable list of high calcium foods.

Cooking if done properly and in hard water does not lessen the calcium content to any appreciable extent. A good dish for high calcium diet is freshly cooked broccoli with cheese sauce. Cheese is another high calcium food. Cream of broccoli soup is excellent. For this, press the cooked broccoli through the sieve, add to a cream sauce made with milk. Season to taste with salt, pepper and nutmeg.

Hubbard squash can be steamed, baked or boiled. It is not a difficult vegetable to sell to a family with definite food likes. But rutabagas! Ever taste them?

They have a very definite flavor, but seem to be increasing in popularity. Their preparation is simple. In cooking the rutabagas, allow one medium-sized one for each serving. Pare, slice and cook in boiling water until tender. Take from the stove at once. Drain. Add salt and pepper and melted butter. Toss lightly and serve. They can also be mashed and seasoned generously with salt, pepper and cream.

Here are more high calcium food ideas.

Beets With Sour Cream Dressing.

1 bunch of beets
2 tablespoons of butter
½ tablespoon of flour
1½ tablespoons of vinegar
1 tablespoon of sugar
½ teaspoon of salt
¼ cup of sour cream

Peel the beets and run through the food chopper. Cool over low heat covered until tender. Add butter and flour mixed, vinegar and sugar. Add salt. Just before serving add the sour cream.

Beets With Lemon Sauce.

2 cups of beets
¼ cup of sugar
2 tablespoons of oil
½ tablespoons of cornstarch
¼ cup of water
3 tablespoons of lemon juice

Mix the sugar and cornstarch. Add the lemon juice. Add water and boil for five minutes. Add the diced beets and serve.

For Quick Seasoning.

Seasonings for French dressing can be kept in a covered jar. A good recipe is one-half cup of salt, one-fourth cup of mustard, two tablespoons of paprika, and a dash of cayenne. These need only be combined with oil and vinegar and blended.

Tips on Vegetable Selection Given

How to select vegetables wisely is often a problem to the novice. Certain vegetables can be tested for freshness.

Beets sold in bunches should have green tops on them. There should be a few leaf scars around the top. Avoid those that are flabby and withered.

Turnips and rutabagas are similar in appearance and there are a white and yellow variety of both these vegetables. Rutabagas are more elongated than turnips as a rule. When you buy, choose plump, firm ones with few fibrous roots at the base. Large overgrown turnips or rutabagas that feel light for their size are probably tough, pithy and strong in flavor.

In buying carrots, look for firm, well-shaped roots. Avoid woody cores, soft places and flabby roots, which make for waste in preparation.

COOKING HINTS

Collect a few vari-colored gourds or small squashes of unusual shape. Coat them with a thin layer of colorless shellac. When the vegetables are dry arrange them in a shallow bowl or tray and use them as table decorations.

Grapes are very perishable. Do not try to break the bunches apart. Cut them with scissors.

Cover thin slices of lemon with minced parsley and chopped ripe olives. Add the lemon slices to the soup just as it is served.

The first essential in carving, whether it be for a roast or turkey, is to have a sharp knife. Another important point is to have the platter large so that it is possible to keep it centered on the platter while carving. If you do not have a carving set, then have the knife to be used for carving sharpened and reserved for the occasion.

Cranberry sauce is a colorful and tasty topping for baked, sliced ham. Add one cup of sauce to a 1½-pound slice of ham after the ham has baked for 30 minutes.

Cranberry jelly makes an effective garnish for fruit salads, croquettes, a la king combinations and roasts. Cut the jelly into one-inch cubes.

Sprinkle grated cheese over hot clear soups; add a little chopped candied ginger to caramel puddings; combine carrots and mushrooms in cream sauce; add a few roasted peanuts to fruit salad; pour a little chili sauce over boiled cauliflower; top escalloped corn with cheese mixed with cracker crumbs.

French Frying of Foods Now Is Simple Process

New Equipment Makes It Possible to Give Crisp, Brown Coat to Vegetables and Meats Without Smoke and Splatter.

By Nancy Ellis.

THE MASCULINE taste long has been pleased by foods French fried. The crusty coat of crisp brown on the outside of oysters, chicken, potato cubes, onion rings and broccoli enhance their appeal and make them first choice.

Modern methods of cooking make it possible to French fry even in a small apartment kitchen without unnecessary smoke and unpleasant clutter. The new equipment prevents splattering of fat. These are heavy kettles, flat bottomed with a narrow deep design. The wire basket drains the foods without allowing crumbs and particles of food to drop into the fat.

Thermometers are available for regulating temperatures of the fat. A high temperature is necessary to brown the foods; but the temperature must be kept constant. The temperature of the fat decreases when cold potatoes or chicken are added. The heat must be increased only to the correct degree. The most successful temperature for French frying potatoes is 390 degrees. For doughnuts, the temperature is 375 degrees. This same temperature is best for fritters.

The new types of shortening on the market are excellent for frying. They have a high smoking point. This makes it possible to increase the temperature up to the desired point without any disagreeable odor or flavor. Lard is also good for frying.

A good recipe is a necessity. This is one secret of success. Others are to fry only a small amount at a time, keep the temperature and time for frying carefully regulated, and drain the food immediately on unglazed paper. You will have no difficulty mastering this art of French frying if you observe these rules.

French Fried Onions.

6 large onions	Flour
Milk	Salt
Deep fat	Pepper

Peel and slice large onions crosswise. Separate the rings using only the larger onion. Save the rest for other use. Cover with milk and soak one hour. Season flour with salt and pepper. Dredge the onion rings with flour.

When food is immersed in fat, time cooking carefully.

Heat the deep fat to 385 degrees. This is a temperature hot enough to brown an inch cube of bread in 60 seconds. Allow the onions to remain in the fat about 2 minutes. Drain on soft paper.

Corn Fritters.

1¼ cup of flour	2 eggs
1½ teaspoons of baking powder	2 cups of canned corn
1 teaspoon of salt	Deep fat

Sift the flour, baking powder and salt. Beat the egg yolks. Add the drained and measured corn. Add to dry ingredients. Fold in the stiffly beaten egg whites.

Heat the deep fat to a temperature of 375 degrees. Drop the fritters into the hot fat and fry until golden brown. This will take about four minutes. Drain on absorbent paper. This recipe makes 18 fritters.

Doughnuts.

2 cups of flour	½ cup of sugar
3 teaspoons of baking powder	1 egg
½ teaspoon of salt	½ cup of milk
½ teaspoon of cinnamon	Deep fat
1 tablespoon of melted shortening.

Sift the dry ingredients. Combine the shortening, sugar and unbeaten eggs. Add dry ingredients alternately with milk. Stir until smooth. Turn out on well-floured board. Cut with floured cutter.

Have temperature of fat at 375 degrees. Place two to four doughnuts in the frying basket. Turn as they rise to the top. Fry until brown. Drain on absorbent paper. This makes 12 doughnuts.

Shirley Temple Coiffure Called 'Style Changer'

New York (AP).

THERE'S something the hairdressers' convention overlooked—Shirley Temple.

Shirley has changed her style of hairdress for the first time since she became a national figure. No more tousled curls, for Shirley's almost 9.

Since this probably will affect mothers of America's 8-year-olds, it might be well to consider the subject.

Miss Agnes F. Schmitt, of Lincoln, Nebr., who specializes in coiffures for little girls, has quite a few ideas on that topic. Here are some of them:

Don't use tin curlers or light pads on your child's hair. They interfere with that most important item in a young lady's regimen—sleep.

Don't cater to cowlicks. Study the shape of your daughter's face, the texture of her hair, her general appearance and adapt the cowlick.

If daughter has a slender face, experiment with wind-blown wisps over the cheeks. Part the hair low—and slant the part.

If the face is full try a part in the center—tying the hair back with two little bows.

If the youngster has a bit of natural wave near the scalp, add three or four curls near the ends of her hair.

Above everything, keep a small girl's hairdress simple. See that she washes her hair with a mild soap or takes a soapless shampoo. And be sure she brushes her hair often.

Use Clean Clothes Pins.

Scrub or soak clothes pins often in warm water and soap suds. If they are not clean they are likely to stain light-colored articles.

Apple Meringue Is Made Easily

Provides Low-Cost Garnish for Many Desserts.

Apple meringue makes a delicious as well as inexpensive garnish for the type of dessert usually served with whipped cream. To prepare the meringue beat two egg whites until stiff; add the grated pulp of one raw apple, gradually, and flavor to taste with lemon juice and sugar. Top each serving with a generous portion of apple meringue. To add a touch of color, press into each garnish of apple meringue a slice of unpared apple, letting just the surface of the skin appear.

To grate apples the easy way, pare apples but do not core. This makes it possible to hold the apple between the stem and blossom end, grating each side in turn without wasting any of the fruit or cutting the fingers.

The Washington Post

Harlan MILLER Over the Coffee

Copyright, 1937, for The Washington Post.

Curious tourists are not content to gaze merely on monuments and public buildings; they like to see where their officials live, the private seats of the mighty . . . Though so far no tours have been organized in Washington, as in Hollywood, to the "homes of the stars."

* * * *

Chief Justice Hughes lives in a huge four-story white stone house, flush with the sidewalk and between two houses almost exactly like it, in the ritziest block of fashionable R street, at No. 2223.

It rejoices in a small glass and metal canopy and square lanterns, high arched windows, and a tiny driveway curves in across the sidewalk to the door.

* * * *

A step away is the Swedish Legation, and across the square the Turkish Embassy . . . Its living room is tremendous . . . Nearby are half a dozen other embassies and legations.

Justice Hughes likes to chat with the colored man sweeping the sidewalk when he emerges on a sunny morning. Probable rent: around $500 a month.

"—Mr. Hughes stops for a chat"

The old Franklin Roosevelt house—where they lived when the President was Assistant Secretary of the Navy—is a block away, at No. 2131 . . . It is a neighborhood much like the fashionable East Sixties in New York—off Massachusetts instead of Fifth avenue.

* * * *

It's bright red brick, with a simple white pillared entrance at one side and a basement service entrance at the other, in front, for Washington is shy on alleys . . . A white balustrade runs around the roof, 4 stories up . . . Behind these arched windows the Roosevelt tots were nursed. It could easily house a dozen newlywed pairs in small apartments. Rent around $500 a month now.

* * * *

Secretary Swanson of the Navy dwells in the same block, at No. 2136, in a largish gray stone house with an iron balcony which runs the length of the second floor . . . The front is adorned with vines, two stone pots flank the doorway and an iron gate encloses the driveway. Probable rent: Around $400.

* * * *

At the next corner stands Secretary Morgenthau's rather magnificent dwelling, No. 2201, a pale grayish-buff four-story structure which in Rome would be called a palace, as indeed would all these houses. A smart operator could subdivide it into a dozen comfortable small apartments; in Moscow 30 families could live in it. Its rent would be around $500 a month.

"—around Mr. Hopkins' doorstep"

Jimmy Roosevelt lives in a sizable square red-brick house with a mansard roof out on O street, in Georgetown, at No. 3331, about a mile away from this fashionable R street sector.

There's quite a fad for Georgetown, though by most Western standards the neighborhood would be deemed a little shabby . . . Jimmy's is one of the nicest houses in the neighborhood . . . His house is three stories high, with white net curtains on the first floor, pink ones higher up, and a crystal chandelier in the hall . . . It's a one-way street, and there are "emergency—no parking" signs in front of his house. It has three or four chimneys. Probable rent: around $300 a month.

* * * *

Young Senator Lodge, who may some day be Jimmy's Republican rival for the Presidency, lives a block away from Jimmy, over on N street.

No. 3337 is a three-story red-brick with white shutters, white Venetian blinds . . . A picket fence which needs painting protects a 15-foot lawn . . . Above the windows are stone wreaths.

The house stretches enormously toward the rear and has a bit of a conservatory with a wall fountain . . . The rent is probably between $250 and $300 a month.

* * * *

Justice Hugo Black's house, now sublet, to which he will probably return after his sojourn in Alexandria, is one of the less ostentatious homes in a prosperous newish neighborhood near the edge of town, on Cathedral avenue.

No. 4511 is a white, wooden colonial house, screened porch at one end, open porch at the other, eight rooms and a two-car garage . . . A typical country club sector . . . Probably rents for around $200 monthly.

Some admirers of Cordell Hull think that Lord Robert Cecil's sojourn at the White House last week helped him get the decision over the American Secretary of State for the $40,000 Nobel peace prize.

Said a jocular Senator yesterday:

Heroes Receive Gold Medals

Hazen Urges Equal Tax on U.S. Property

Says That Is Only Way to Fix Contribution to District.

Six Police, Fire Heroes Rewarded at Board of Trade Session.

The proportion of Federal contributions to the cost of the District government should be determined by assessment of Federal property "on the same basis as other property," Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen told the Board of Trade last night in the Willard Hotel.

At the same meeting, six heroes of the police and fire departments were given annual awards for exceptionally courageous exploits.

Plunging at once into the matter of Government contributions to the District's expenses, Commissioner Hazen said:

"Every real American should wish to see here a Capital which would be the most beautiful city in the world. The financial responsibility of making it such should be shared generously by the people of the Nation through the Federal Congress."

Points to Future.

Any method of attempting to settle the problem of the Government's share in the cost of District government other than through the assessed value of its property, was characterized by Commissioner Hazen as "illogical."

In the years to come, he pointed out, the Federal Government will acquire more real estate, thus removing it from taxation.

He cited the dwindling ratio of Federal contributions since 1920, when it was reduced from a proportion of one-half to one of 40 per cent. He continued:

"Beginning with the fiscal year 1925 the so-called lump-sum payment was adopted. During the fiscal years 1925 down to 1930 the annual payment by the Federal Government was $9,000,000. For the fiscal year 1933 the payment was reduced to $7,775,000 and in 1934 a further reduction was made to $5,700,000, which continued through the fiscal year 1936. For the fiscal year 1937 and the current year of 1938 the amount of the Federal payment was $5,000,000."

Sees Threat to Schools.

Discussing demands for a reduction in the costs of the District government, Commissioner Hazen observed:

"Any attempt to reduce maintainance and operating costs to any considerable degree must of necessity come from a reduction of such costs in respect to the schools, public welfare, police, fire and health departments. . . . In regard to the schools, to fix the cost at its present level, or to attempt to decrease it, means no additional schools and no additional teachers, or fewer schools and teachers."

As to the Health Department's items in the budget, the Commissioner called attention to adverse criticisms in recent years concerning health conditions in the District and the fact that mortality statistics here have "attracted unfavorable comment both nationally and locally."

After reciting figures showing the additional burdens placed on the Government since 1932 and the decline in the assessed value of real estate over the same period, he remarked:

"It can readily be seen why it becomes necessary to raise the additional taxes for the year 1938 and thereafter."

Discusses Budget.

When he came to his discussion of the 1939 budget, Hazen said that the Commissioners "could not find their way clear" to hold it to the figure appropriated for the current year. After discussing the various items in which there have been increases, and pointing out that the Commissioners had cut $17,000,000 from the original requests of department heads for a budget of $87,000,000, Commissioner Hazen said:

"I do not believe there is any budget in any city in the country that has to withstand the scrutiny of the District budget . . . I submit that after all this scrutiny, after all this careful examination and investigation, any increases in appropriations one year over another must have been fully justified."

E. F. Colladay, chairman of the Board's finance committee, declared, "we want our share of whatever tax relief to business is available."

"Congress," Colladay said, "is considering what changes shall be made in such taxes as the undistributed profits tax and the capital gains tax. They now recognize that these taxes in their present form are doing more harm than good."

Hero Awards Listed.

The hero awards, announced by Robert V. Fleming, were to the following:

Gold medal: Detective Sergt. John A. Caton for his attempt to arrest three men who were holding up an Upshur street ice cream store, during which the officer was badly wounded, and to Private William P. Waldenmaier, of No. 9 Truck Company, for his rescue of a comrade at a fire last December 21.

Silver medal: Lieut. Harvey J. Clark, of No. 7 Engine Company, for his rescue of a woman and her two children during a fire on Rhode Island avenue last December, and to Private Augustus Bodwell, of the police, stabbed with a razor by a crazed man, who was then shot and killed by Bodwell in self-defense.

Bronze bar: Private John A. Burgess, of the police, for his rescue of one marooned boy and attempted rescue of another during the Potomac floods last May, and to Private Jesse M. Jamison, of No. 17 Engine Company, for his capture of a man pursued by police.

Kisses Help Speed Capital Chest Drive

'French Salute' Adopted to Boost Contributions for Charities.

$656,084 Remains to Be Pledged in City by Tuesday Night.

With $1,402,915.64 already reported and only two more report meetings scheduled, workers in the Community Chest army went forth from yesterday's meeting determined to reach the goal of $2,059,000 by Tuesday night. There will be no report meeting today, the next being held Monday afternoon at the Willard.

Newbold Noyes, former campaign chairman and former president of the Chest, praised efforts of the Chest army. He cited that "we are well into the enemy territory."

Randolph Leigh, chairman of the suburban unit, referred to the "French general" salute bestowed by "Radio Joe" Kaufman on Mrs. Howze at a recent meeting, and told how he and Mrs. Leigh had collected $20 for similar "decorations." Chairman Noyes announced Mrs. Charles A. Goldsmith, veteran Chest worker, was to make the report for the special assignments unit, and "I am going to kiss Mrs. Goldsmith." He did.

The soliciting units reported 14,976 contributions yesterday amounting to $165,585.90 bringing the total to date to 124,735 contributions amounting to $1,402,915.64—68.13 per cent of the goal. This leaves $656,084.36, or almost 32 per cent of the goal, to be obtained by Tuesday night.

Consistent increases in many of the larger gifts, the large number of group solicitation firms reporting 100 per cent and the great number of Government departments that are going far beyond 100 per cent of quota encourage Chest officials to believe the goal will be reached by the closing meeting of the campaign Tuesday night.

Forman Shows War Pictures In D.C. Lecture

Explorer Describes China Crisis for National Geographic Society.

Harrison Forman, author and explorer, who has just returned from China, described the Sino-Japanese conflict to the National Geographic Society last night at Constitution Hall.

Forman, who traveled in Mongolia, Tibet and Shensi Province and Shanghai, said it was the agreement between Gen. Chiang Kai-shek and the Communist forces of Shensi that contributed to the war in China. When the general was a prisoner of the Communists, he was freed, according to Forman, because the Communist leaders felt that he was the strongest man in China and that all peoples of China, regardless of political cleavage, should unite to defend the republic against any invasion.

Te first motion pictures taken of the well-trained and well-equipped soldiers of Shensi were shown on the screen as Forman described the army as one of the best-trained in the East.

Forman reached Shanghai the day before the conflict which finally led to its submission to Japan. He defied death in his efforts to get close-up shots of the war. Bombs dropped near him as he trained his camera on scenes of military activity. He told of the bombing of the U. S. S. Augusta and his pictures showed the spot where the bomb dropped on deck. Several of the American sailors injured by the bomb were shown examining the damage to the ship's deck.

Jewish Group Hears Coffee's Tolerance Plea

Treatment in Poland Will Be Protested to Hull, Roosevelt, Others.

Denouncing intolerance in a strongly worded plea for racial and religious freedom, Representative John M. Coffee, of Washington, last night told the convention of the Jewish People's Committee, meeting in the National Press Club auditorium, to protest alleged oppression of Polish Jews, that "this country was built on the idea of an asylum for the downtrodden and oppressed peoples of the world."

At the conclusion of the World War, he said, democratic institutions were set up in the nations of Europe, but one by one they have turned to fascist governments until today "these forces of reaction" are attempting to seize control even in England and France.

In his plea for tolerance Representative Coffee was joined by Senator Elbert D. Thomas, of Utah, who urged that no steps be taken by the conference which would arouse public opinion against the Jews of America.

The petition which the group will present to Secretary Hull, protesting alleged attacks on Polish Jews, Senator Thomas asserted, "is American in its outlook, and represents the best in our institutions."

Commtitees to protest the treatment of Jews in Poland were appointed to call on President Roosevelt, Secretary of State Hull, Vice President Garner, Speaker Bankhead, Count Jerzy Potocki, the Polish Ambassador, and the members of the House Foreign Affairs Committee and Senate Foreign Relations Committee.

The meeting was presided over by Ben Gold.

The Senate yesterday received from President Roosevelt the nomination of John P. Wenchel, of Washington, to be assistant general counsel for the Bureau of Internal Revenue.

Wenchel was given a recess appointment on September 20. A "career" employe for 23 years, he will be chief counsel of the bureau if confirmed.

Girl Workers Nominate Man And 8 Women for Wage Board

Nearly 100 waitresses, chambermaids and other women employes of hotels and restaurants, last night nominated nine representatives—including one man, a labor organizer—to sit in the wage conference which will recommend a minimum salary for women workers in the industry.

The man whom the girls chose to represent them is James McNamara, labor organizer and financial secretary of Local 80, Hotel and Restaurant Employes International Alliance.

Others nominated were Evelyn Cooper, a counter girl; Sadie Colt, Garden T Shoppe waitress; Virginia Newman, Annapolis Hotel chambermaid; Esther Spears, Hotel Hamilton chambermaid; Flora Schaffer, waitress; Mavis Field, Raleigh Hotel waitress; Florence Plotnick, unemployed waitress, and Vivian Gray, Blue Bell Restaurant waitress.

The Minimum Wage Board will meet Tuesday to choose three employe representatives from the nine nominees.

1,500 Boys Aid Dedication of Southeast Club

Tokens Dear to Hearts of Youngsters Go Into Cornerstone.

More than 1,500 youngsters joined their elders last night as the cornerstone of the new home of the Southeast Boys Club was laid at Seventeenth street and Massachusetts avenue southeast.

The cornerstone was sealed by Frank R. Jelleff, president of the Boys Club of Washington, assisted by two graduates of the Southeast Club and four youngsters, representing each boys club in the city.

Into the cornerstone of the new clubhouse, which will be the largest and most up to date south of New York, went copies of Washington's newspapers, a copy of the by-laws of the club and the minutes of the first meeting of the board of trustees, in 1920.

Boys Bring Gifts.

Into it also went those things dear to the hearts of boys, for each of the four youthful representatives brought a gift.

James Dinsmore, 12, of the Boys Club of Washington, offered a pen knife. Herbert Collins, 13, of the Georgetown Boys Club, gave a top. Ray Carzon, 13, of the Northeast Boys Club, put in three marbles, and Keith Crock, of the Southeast Boys Club, sacrificed a toy truck.

The two adults, graduates of the club, who assisted at the ceremonies, were Darius W. Gaskins, an engineer with the Potomac Electric Power Co., and a graduate of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, who instructs in woodwork at the club as a hobby, and John L. Parkhill, jr., honor graduate of Catholic University and a civil engineer, who surveyed the site.

The club will accommodate 3,000 youths. It is the gift of Jelleff and Mrs. Eleanor Patterson.

Swope Leads in Rites.

Master of ceremonies last night was Dr. Chester D. Swope, secretary of the boys club. Invocation was pronounced by the Right Rev. Mgr. Eugene J. Connolly, pastor of St. Peter's Catholic Church. Jelleff gave a brief address in laying the cornerstone.

Sidney Taliaferro, in the chief address, paid tribute to Jelleff and Mrs. Patterson, and the work of the club in building the citizens of tomorrow.

Baptist Speaker Says Youth Ideas Control the World

Ideas of youth control the world, Dr. Frank H. Leavell, secretary of the youth committee, Baptist World Alliance, asserted last night at the annual banquet of the District of Columbia-Maryland Baptist Student Union.

Held at Metropolitan Baptist Church, Sixth and A streets northeast, under sponsorship of the Women's Missionary Union of the District, the banquet marked the union's tenth anniversary convention, which is to be continued at sessions tonight and tomorrow.

Speaking on the theme, "Today and Tomorrow With Christ," Dr. Leavell declared that "Christianity is not on trial in the colleges—the students are."

Miss Alice Veeraswamy, Indian student at Crozier Seminary, Philadelphia, spoke of the "great responsibility" of Baptist missions in India.

At the First Baptist Church, Sixteenth and O streets northwest, Dr. Gordon Poteat, former missionary to China, will speak tonight.

Charles Finds Strange Castle And Stranger Toys on Trip

Hobby Horses With Manes, Picture Books and Little Princesses Amuse Tiny Visitor in Children's House.

Charles Beasley, jr., 3, motivated by wanderlust, yesterday found a strange castle—where there were little princesses in rompers and painted ones in books, and hobby horses with manes and jacks-in-the-box that said "boo" when they jumped.

The castle was the Georgetown Children's House, 3238 N street northwest.

Charles was at play in the rear of his home, 3333 N street, early yesterday, while his mother, Mrs. Mary Anne Beasley, was busy around the house. He wandered from the yard, and around the block. He spent a lot of time looking at things, and when he tried to get home he was lost and it was late.

Bewildered, Charles stopped in front of the Children's House. He could hear merry voices. It began to rain and Charles began to cry and his tears got all mixed up with raindrops.

Then the door opened and Miss Winona Rorbye, the director of the Children's House, sent one of her assistants out to fetch Charles in.

Charles liked the hobby horse. He liked the other girls and boys. But most of all he liked a book about animals.

Just about that time Charles' father arrived. He had gone to the police when he found his son gone, and the police had sent him to the Children's House, where, they had heard, Charles was having a grand time.

"O. K.," said Charles in 3-year-old parlance, "I'll go home, daddy, but I've got to go to the Zoo and see if animals like these are real."

Company to Give Employes Bonuses

Employes of Woodward & Lothrop will receive bonuses at Thanksgiving and Christmas, the management announced yesterday.

Approximately 3,000 members of the staff employed since July 31, will benefit from extra compensation to be distributed on Wednesday. A week's additional salary will be given those who had served five years or more previous to July 31. Decreasing proportionately to length of employment, a bonus of a quarter week's salary will be presented to those who had served less than a year on July 31.

The Christmas bonus to "each store member whose record shows no unexercised absence" will be given December 24, in sums ranging from $2.50 to employes on the rolls since November 1, to $20 to veterans of ten years' standing. More than 4,000 persons will receive Christmas bonuses.

Western Maryland Drive Gets Boost

The Washington committee of the Western Maryland College $250,000 building campaign met at a dinner last night at the New Colonial Hotel and reported the receipt of $3,640 of the $25,000 Washington quota. Dr. William Wiley Chase, chairman of the Washington committee, introduced Dr. Fred G. Holloway, president of Western Maryland College, who described need for a men's dormitory, field house and library.

Roger J. Whiteford, Washington, chairman of the special gifts committee, urged closer relationship among the members of the Washington alumni and invited the committee to attend a get-together reception at his home early in December.

At about 8 o'clock tonight, Capt. William S. Hodges, officer of the First Regiment of Washington Volunteers during the Spanish-American War, will call the roster of the regiment. About 100 veterans of the siege of Santiago will answer when the 1,000 names are called.

The occasion wil be the annual reunion of the District's volunteer regiment, at the Washington Hotel, on the thirty-eighth anniversary of the day they were mustered out.

About 250 of the original 1,000 are living. Besides swapping stories of wartime days, the veterans are expected to urge the erection of a memorial to their dead comrades.

Fur Strikers Here Must Show Cause

The International Fur Workers Union of the United States and Canada, and its local, will have to show cause in District Court next Wednesday why H. Zirkin & Sons, Inc., fur store at 821 Fourteenth street northwest, should not be granted an order enjoining the union from allegedly intimidating the company's employes and from parading in front of the store.

Irwin Goldstein, attorney representing the store, alleged in the bill of complaint only two employes were on strike. The picketing unions are affiliated with the C. I. O., while the store has a contract with the A. F. of L., it was stated.

Management Body Indorses Program For Group Health

"Enthusiastic indorsement of the program of the Group Health Association" was embodied in a resolution adopted last night by 200 members of the Society for Advancement of Management in their November meeting at the Admiral Club, 1640 Rhode Island avenue northwest.

Composed of executives, engineers and technicians interested in problems of management in government and private industry, the society expressed itself as "dismayed and surprised to hear that the Medical Society of the District is so far out of sympathy with the aims and practices of the Group Health Association as actively to oppose it."

The society, continued the resolution, "recognizes the service rendered by constructive efforts to solve the problems presented by current methods of financing medical and hospital services, and heartily indorses the underlying principles directing the endeavors of the Group Health Association, Inc., organized by employes of the Federal Home Loan Bank Board."

Brittle Comedy In New Vein Is Earle Feature

Harriet Hoctor Dominates Clever Vaudeville Bill on the Stage.

"IT'S LOVE I'M AFTER." Warner Brothers picturization of a story by Maurice Hanline, adapted to the screen by Casey Robinson, costarring Leslie Howard and Bette Davis, with Olivia de Havilland, Patric Knowles, Eric Blore, George Barbier, Bonita Granville, Spring Byington, Georgia Caine, Veda Ann Borg, E. E. Clive, Valerie Bergere, Sarah Edwards, Grace Fields, Harvey Clark, Ed Mortimer and Thomas Mitt. Directed by Archie L. Mayo. Reviewed Friday afternoon by Mary Harris. At the Earle Theater.

Love goes on the loose in this one, with the formerly dignified Leslie Howard figuring as the principal rambler. The idea seems to be that the girls can't leave Leslie alone and Leslie can't leave the girls alone. On the side lines is his troo-hoo love, played by Bette Davis, tossing tantrums and cussing and going through all the didoes of a gal who would pick a Don Juan for a fiance.

The net result is to add another cluster of leaves to the Howard laurels. He proves that he is a top-flight comedian as well as a romantic lead and a sound Shakespearean actor.

The Howard role is, oddly enough, that of a Shakespearean actor who is also the object of the maundering affections of too many young girls. He's sincerely fond of his spitfire leading lady, Bette Davis, but he also likes all the other girls and leaves a trail of irate husbands and smoldering sweethearts from Broadway to Oshkosh.

The language of abuse is singularly rich on the cherry lips of Bette Davis and contrasts too beautifully with the quotes from the Bard constantly indulged in by her boy friend. With some justification Bette calls her boy friend "you swine," "you billy goat," "you brawling bull."

Blore Richly Cast.

But while Miss Davis and Mr. Howard indulge so tellingly in billingsgate, blank verse and the near-homicidal scenes that characterize a grande passion, their parts are hardly more important than that of the only Eric Blore. More than ever Eric glorifies his favorite role of gentleman's gentleman. He seethes and mutters and sputters, he tears off his toupee in a fit of rage and the final flash shows Eric in a fit of complete hysterics.

The direction is rich and smooth, the dialogue has a constant shimmer of wit that flowers often in fireworks. The action has plenty of panic spots.

Topping these terrific incidents is the one where Howard decides to disillusion his newest debutante admirer by making shocking advances. Ah! But but it turns out that the sweet young thing wants nothing better than a "fate worse than death." It is Howard and not the debbie who emerges from the fray berumpled and tattered.

Olivia de Haviland plays Howard's baby-faced admirer with kittenish smoothness, with Patric Knowles, a handsome newcomer, doing himself very nicely as her indignant fiance. Expert interpretations in less important roles are given by Spring Byington, Bonita Granville and George Barbier.

Miss Hoctor Tops Stage.

Harriet Hoctor, premiere danseuse of these United States, offers a couple of beautiful numbers, topped by a modernistic one in "blues" rhythm. Also lovely is the straight ballet number in which she brings back the picture of her Ziegfeld "Follies" days.

"Cookie" Bowers proclaimed by Audrey Sieber (angelic in white chiffon and brilliants) as having usual mightily clever turn. But, starred in foreign parts, offers his Cookie, when you come back to the home folks, why don't you get up a new one or two for us? Another familiar but highly polished act is that of the Four Kraddocks, whose idea of humor is as equivocal as their acrobatics are clean-cut. Of Paul Sydell and his pathetic little fox terrier Spot, we can only say that Spot is wonderful, but that some animal-lovers may not be exactly pleased. The Merry Mace, "dancers," and some beautiful and literally diamond-studded posing by the Spurgats wind up a show that is long on amusement from both screen and stage angles.

Palace

"Conquest," which has Garbo as Countess Walewska, Polish patriot, and Charles Boyer, as Napoleon, after a crowded week, begins a second crowded week. Which was to have been expected.

Beseeching countrymen implore Walewska to appeal to the susceptible Emperor to help Poland; Walewska appeals; Napoleon succumbs and history wrote the aftermath. Some historic license has been taken with the actual facts, but so compellingly is the Walewska episode presented that it all seems as real and vivid as today's headlines. You may even perceive something suggestive of current dictators' pet poses and fetishes in Napoleon's actions.

It has been said that Boyer is the real star, that Garbo, for the first time in her career, plays second lead. That is a matter of personal opinion. No dyed-in-the-wool Garbo-fan will concede an inch of closeups in favor of Boyer. Certain it is that the gentleman plays with vigor and strength. But Garbo, ever the subtle craftsman, perhaps wins by her defensive charm. She is Walewska, and as they say, eternal woman.

Pete Smith presents a short-reel showing the progress and prowess of young Glen Morris, decathlon winner in the recent Olympics. Robert Benchley demonstrates what happens sometimes in the best theaters in "A Night at the Movies." The newsreel contains vivid shots of the shelling and evacuation of Shanghai.

Add Walewska to the album of unforgettable Garbo portraits. And check off Boyer as one Garbo leading man who can manage to speak above an awe-stricken whisper.

Winner at Eight.

Marie Blake, currently in Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's "Everybody Sing," made her professional debut at the age of 8 as a vaudeville singer.

'Navy Blue and Gold,' Waring's Band Feature a Rare Bill at Loew's Capital

Stage and Screen Combine to Afford Exceptional Entertainment.

"NAVY BLUE AND GOLD." Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picturization of a novel by George Bruce, adapted to the screen by the author, featuring Robert Young, James Stewart and Lionel Barrymore, with Florence Rice, Billie Burke, Tom Brown, Samuel S. Hinds, Paul Kelly, Barnett Parker, Frank Albertson, Minor Watson, Robert Middlemass, Philip Terry, Charles Waldron, Pat Flaherty, Stanley Morner and Matt McHugh. Directed by Sam Wood. Previewed Tuesday, November 16. At Loew's Capitol Theater.

It is a bullet-proof bill that is on view this week at Loew's Capitol Theater.

Here is one of those rare instances in which both screen and stage—or vice versa, if you choose—conspire to form as nearly a 100 per cent entertainment as is ever apt to be encountered. "Navy Blue and Gold," the film feature, as has been suggested here on previous occasions, is the best picture of its kind ever caught by the cameras. Waring's Pennsylvanians, headed by their founder, Fred Waring, on this visit offer the best hour of unalloyed diversion they have ever presented in the Capital.

"Navy Blue and Gold" is considerably more than any mere reflection of life at the U. S. Naval Academy. It is a drama into which have been woven elements of appeal that are as unusual as they are irresistible. The piece is preponderantly a comedy, but underlying all the fun, and the minute dissection of three sharply contrasted characters, is a basis of filial devotion of a son to his father that imparts a more vital emotional impact than any conventional love story involving the attachment of opposite genders.

They Were Three.

Three lads gain entry to the Naval Academy at Annapolis. One is a great football player who preceives in the middy's uniform only an open sesame to advantageous social contacts and a possible rich marriage; another is a son of wealth, deeply imbued with the spirit of the Navy and an overwhelming ambition to star on the gridiron; the third, a Navy fireman, second grade, who gains admission to the service school because the tradition of the service has been bred into every sinew of his being. The three become roommates and each is subjected to the grueling discipline of the institution and the exquisite brutalities of the upper classmen. Roger Ash manages to take care of himself after the manner of an athletic cad; Richard Gates, jr., is carried along by his own enthusiasm and "Truck" Cross by a tremendous urge to vindicate the name of his father, unjustly court-martialed after a sea catastrophe for which he was in no way responsible.

About this basis of divergent viewpoints and aspirations has been woven a story that outlines an authentic picture of academy routine, sparkles with contagious humor and touches the edges of romance with delicacy and charm. For a rousingly thrilling climax, fringed with hilarious comedy, an Army-Navy football game is reproduced with all of the pageantry of this most spectacular event in sportdom. The whole thing adds up to a screen play that causes an audience to explode in spontaneous applause almost before the final scene has faded off the silver sheet.

No happier choice than Robert Young, Tom Brown and James Stewart could have been made for the "Three Musketeers" of Annapolis. This excellence of selection runs through the entire roster of the cast, with Lionel Barrymore sharing stellar honors in a comparatively small part which nevertheless, symbolizes the undying spirit of those who have lived their lives in the United States Navy, and Florence Rice perfectly epitomizing the picture's engaging quality of romance. Billie Burke, Samuel S. Hinds, Barnett Parker—one of the best of the "gentleman's gentlemen"—Matt McHugh, Paul Kelly, Frank Albertson, Minor Watson, Robert Middlemass and a complete cadet enrollment contribute so much to the various ramifications of the play that specification is out of the question.

Waring's Finest Act.

And these Waring's Pennsylvanians are just as good. The whole tenor of the act has been altered since the band's last appearance here. One suspects that the Hollywood experience in making "Varsity Show" has had something to do with it, because comedy and a smooth-flowing informality now supplant the former strict adherence to rigid and conventional routines. The Pennsylvanians play fewer concerted numbers than usual and emphasis is laid upon specialties and seemingly spontaneous comic effects that place this organization in a class by itself more definitely than ever before has been the case.

Fred Waring, "Poly" McClintock, "Scotty" Bates and the MacFarland Twins support a continuous play of kidding humor; Tom Waring, a vastly improved barytone, sings "Ol' Man River," Ferne and her violin are a superlatively melodious "team." Gordon Goodman displays an exceptional "stratosphere tenor," Charlie Newman is a real harmonica virtuoso and Al Bottorf no less skillful a master of the vibraphone. The "Three Fellas" comprise a fine singing trio, Ethelyn Williams is an ace songstress, and Betty Atkinson adds a lively bit of baton-swinging, tap dancing and acrobatics to a symposium of features that no local stage ever has equalled.

The Fox Movietone News by now, I dare say, is the only surviving auxiliary remaining after a bit of pruning of the supplementaries to make more time for Fred and his boys and girls—a very fine idea, indeed.

Doors open today at 10:15 a. m. If you are smart, you will be there waiting.

Trans-Lux

In this week's show at the Trans-Lux Theater first mention must be made of the sensational war pictures showing actual encounters and taken at great risk by daring camera men. The Japs are shown pushing on to Nanking, as Shanghai counts her dead and wounded and attempts to clean up and put in some order what is left of that formerly beautiful city, while Tokyo is shown celebrating Japanese success with parades and other spectacular gayety.

Other scenes covered in the International picture are the Nine-Power Conference in Brussels; and Italy, Japan and Germany signing an agreement of alliance agianst communism, in Rome.

Personalities in the pictured news include Senator La Follette, advocating an amendment to require entrance or not into war, by national vote only; Lord Beaverbrook who is paying us a visit; George M. Cohan who impersonates the President; Frank Morrison, secretary of the A. F. of L. who makes an appeal; Clinton Davidson the Nobel Prize Winner; Sir Harry Twyford, new Lord Mayor of London; Jean Broadhurst who has developed a vaccine to offset measles, and President Vargas of Brazil visiting the President.

In the short film section there is a funny Disney cartoon, "Modern Inventions," and a brace of novelty pictorials.

Kiss for Picture Is Ray Bolger's First

Ray Bolger, in his current role in "Rosalie," kisses a girl for the first time in his screen and stage career. The girl is Virginia Grey.

Born to Act.

Billie Burke, featured at M-G-M, is the daughter of a famous circus clown, Billy Ethelbert.

Swings Diamond-Studded Baton

Pictured above is the sprightly young female "drum major" who led the spectacular finale in the filmusical, "Varsity Show," costarring Fred Waring and his Pennsylvanians and Dick Powell, on a local screen not so long ago. She is performing an identical function at Loew's Capitol Theater this week, where the Pennsylvanians are providing the complete stage entertainment.

In Hollywood

With JIMMY FIDLER

Hollywood, Nov. 19.—Idol chatter: Wonder how many of you can name the ten most pupular screen stars of 1927? Look alikes: Phyllis Brooks and Virginia Cherrill. The first Hollywoodite to wear a silk neckscarf was not an actor, but a Filipino houseboy. Louise Fazenda never passes up a new fortune teller—and never visits the same one twice. Candidate for the wittiest conversationalist award: Glenda Farrell.

LOUISE FAZENDA.

Amazing how much more beautiful Virginia Bruce is in real life than on the screen. Most dashing creation of this or any other week: that goatee Errol Flynn is sporting for his new opus. Wonder how many smokes have been added to the average Hollywood male's golf game by the links costumes our glamour gals are sporting this season? Francis Lederer always looks as though he is about to say something profound. Hollywood's feminine version of Damon and Pythias: Madge Evans and Una Merkel.

Shirley Temple would like to wear her hair in pigtails—which might be cute at that. Judging by the number of burglar alarms installed in his new house, Pat O'Brien must have a complex. Two-word description of Tilly Losch: Rilly Lush. Paul Muni could give Garbo cards and still beat her out for the title of Hollywood's most retiring star. Just as I expected, that Titian-haired Arleen Whelan is bowling over Hollywood's bachelors like ten pins. When Jeanette MacDonald is really mad, she uses her pet cuss words, flibbergibble and kittletoop!

There is a director at Paramount who is enjoying the last laugh. A few days ago he took his company to Malibu Lake—way up thar' in the Santa Monica Mountains—to shoot location scenes near a ranch house. No sooner had the cameras started turning for the first take than the rancher started hammering. The director stopped work to protest. "Twenty bucks—or I put in the day building hen coops," announced the hi-jacker. He collected—and took in another twenty on each of the three following days, while the hapless director fumed. On the fourth day a studio truck unloaded a camera and several workmen on the location and the hammering started as usual. All day long the camera crew buzzed around on the location—and all day long the rancher hammered. But no one paid him his bribe. The camera crew were extras, hired at the director's own expense, and the camera was only a dummy.

What with two movie marriages on the shoals because of mother-in-law trouble, it is a real pleasure to tell this little story about Dorothy Lamour's mama. Dorothy—in spite of all that "exotic publicity issued by her studio—is a very happily married young lady. Her husband is Herbert Kay. Hollywood sees very little of him because he spends most of his time leading an orchestra in Chicago. Recently, however, he took a six weeks' vacation and spent it with Dorothy, who shares an apartment with her mother. When Herbert arrived, Mama moved into a hotel. Not because Herb isn't popular with her; but because she wanted to be popular with Herb. She is—and there are plenty of Hollywood mothers who might well profit by her example.

Speaking of "exotic" publicity, there is a paragraph in this morning's "news" letter from one of the major studios that takes all prizes. It states that Beverly Roberts has paved a hallway in her home with old tennis balls, and that she spends an hour every day walking on those balls, in her bare feet, to acquire grace, and beautify said tootsies.

Hmmmm . . mm . . Sometimes I grow suspicious.

Stars to Dance At Variety Club Dinner Tonight

Fred Waring, Johnny Perkins on Program of Event Here.

The Variety Club of Washington will give its fourth annual dinner and dance, in the main ballroom of the Hotel Willard tonight.

Fred Waring and his orchestra will be on the program which also includes Leon Brusiloff and his orchestra, Lee Everett, Audrey Sieber, John Steel and the three Yates Sisters.

Johnny Perkins will fly here from Pittsburgh to act as master of ceremonies. Also flying from Pittsburgh for this event is John H. Harris, national chief barker of the Variety Clubs of America.

Noted executives in the field of entertainment are expected from the Eastern Seaboard.

Carter Barron, of the Loew organization, is chief barker of the local "tent" and at this affair he will officially relinquish his gavel to his successor, Julian Brylawski, head of the Warner Brothers realty department, who this week was elected leader for 1938. Other newly elected officers and members of the board will likewise be presented formally for the first time. Sidney B. Lust is general chairman. Others on the committee are A. L. Lichtman, Harry Sommerville, Hardie Meakin, Ray Bell, Archie Engle, Arthur DeTitta, Sam Wheeler, Sam Brown, Joseph P. Morgan, Ernie Johnston, Ed Heiber, Julian Brylawski, Sam Galanty, Tom O'Donnell, Rudolph Berger.

Another Story Of Newspapers On Met Screen

'Back in Circulation' Is Fast-Moving Yarn of Fourth Estate.

"BACK IN CIRCULATION." First National picturization of a story by Alois Bower St. John, adapted to the screen by Warren Duff, featuring Joan Blondell and Pat O'Brien, with John Litel, Margaret Lindsay, Eddie Acuff, George E. Stone, Regis Toomey and Herbert Rawlinson. Directed by Ray Enright. Reviewed Friday night by Dorothea Lewis.

Yep, another newspaper yarn with a violent managing editor, a gal reporter who smashes office doors right and left and often, and extras on the street before the story breaks—that's what this is—plus some saving graces.

In fact, it has just about enough saving graces to keep it interesting and irequently amusing. Most important are its speed and energy, be they accurate reporting or not, and Pat O'Brien and Joan Blondell, two agreeable and spirited people. They never make us believe that life is like this in the Fourth Estate, no, not even on the most tabloid of all tabloids, but we doubt that a great many folks will mind too much. Then there is the handsome Margaret Lindsay and a very nice straightforward performance by John Litel.

Story Turns Up.

The plot comes to us through the courtesy of the Morning Express, for it needs a story, and in getting one has an autopsy performed, discovers poison, gets the widow indicted, convicted, and then—well, you know tabloids as the movies see them.

O'Brien is the rampaging managing editor, Joan is his star reporter, one Timothea Blake, who does more of her dirty work for love of the editor than love of the paper, but she sure does do it! Having started the ball rolling that bounces the lovely Mrs. Wade right into a death cell, Timmy suddenly decides that Mrs. Wade is innocent and goes to work on that angle with even more energy than when she was playing on the other side. These cinema newspaper people, they must all have too much thyroid, or something.

However, the change of heart does let Miss Blondell be a bit more serious at times and quiet—too—saving that corner screaming episode and the door slams—than usual, which we appreciate. This subdued-tone started creeping over her in "The Perfect Specimen" and it is becoming.

There are a number of familiar faces scattered about through the cast whose names will be found in small type preceding these comments.

A Few "Boners."

As for us and the picture, well smashing doors doesn't seem tops in hilarity, and we got a little puzzled when Joan starts on an auto drive in one dress and arrives in another, and a photographer snaps a picture of a woman in a black dress on the courthouse steps and turns up with a finished print of her in lovely white evening gown, sitting very comfortably in a cozy room. But the actors do well with what they have to work with, and the whole thing has a nice fast pace, for which we are ever thankful. There's a bit of suspence too, though it doesn't lead to too much.

Subsidiaries include an entertaining Edgar Bergen-Charlie MacCarthy short, with Charlie a whiz on the football field and a devil with the women off. There is a musical reel featuring Arnold Johnson and his orchestra, and the newsreel.

Hideous Facial Colors to Mark New Television

Television will produce the most hideous actors ever to strain the human eye!

Terrifying green and yellow gargoyles will caper and sing before the television, when this form of entertainment becomes an established custom.

But listeners and watchers before their television sets will see only handsome and beautiful faces.

All of this was demonstrated recently by Hollywood make-up experts who have perfected television make-up.

The most beautiful "guinea pig" ever experimented upon, Betty Grable, star of "Thrill of a Lifetime," aided in the demonstration, submitting her lovely blonde physiognomy to the application of weird colors.

Miss Grable's countenance became a green and yellow mask, under the hands of Wally Westmore, director of make-up for Paramount.

Westmore explained that infra-red rays of the televisor "burn up" all red coloring in the human complexion, making application of green necessary, replacing red lips and cheeks. The green, when transmitted to television sets, becomes a rosy-color.

SHORT SUBJECTS

The Post's New Yorker

By LEONARD LYONS

New York, Nov. 19.

TRAGEDY: Robert Raven is the 27-year-old American interne about whom the newspapers wrote recently, when both his eyes were shot out by shrapnel, while he was fighting in Spain. Raven now is at the Saelices Hospital, trying to recuperate . . . Every day he insists that his nurses take him out to the spacious gardens, so that he can be near the grass and the trees. Even when it's cold, there amid the trees, Raven insists upon that ritual . . . "Because when I return to America," he explains, "they'll give me a party, another party, then another party, and then I'll be out in the park—with a tin cup."

• • • •

SWANK: For many months, Yussel Jacobs, manager of Max Schmeling, has been urging Damon Runyon to take him to the Colony Club, New York's swankiest restaurant . . . Mr. Runyon finally relented this week and agreed to escort Jacobs through the elegant and social portals of the Colony . . . They arrived, and Runyon led the way. The headwaiter spied him, and nodded, politely. Then he spied Jacobs, flung wide his arms and shouted, "Yussel, my Yussel." And so to Mr. Jacobs was accorded every courtesy of the most fashionable place—all because the head-waiter once had been a trainer for Andre Routis, the Belgian fighter whom Jacobs managed.

• • • •

REGRET: A moviegoer met Alan Campbell and his wife, Dorothy Parker, and gushed about "A Star Is Born," which they had written. "I just want to tell you," he congratulated, "that even after these months, I still believe that to be the finest picture ever made in Hollywood" . . . "Really?" Miss Parker confessed. "I wish I'd seen it!"

• • • •

CELEBRATION: George S. Kaufman, celebrated his birthday. Among the presents received the one most treasured is a book which took 20 years to collect—a scrapbook containing every newspaper clipping about Mr. Kaufman's plays since he first wrote "Dulcy." He never saved any of these clippings. They were presented by his 80-year-old mother.

• • • •

RELIEF: Gabriel M. Kaplan, who is in charge of the P. R. canvassers now engaged in tabulating the vote for city council, over which there has been much excitement, decided to ease the tension Saturday by reading the football scores to all the employes. Ten minutes after he began, a policeman assigned to watch the proceedings for irregularities rushed up to Kaplan and shouted: "Never mind that, never mind that stuff!" . . . "Why, is there anything wrong in my doing this" Kaplan asked. "No," the cop returned, "but never mind that stuff about football. What I want to know is—who won the third race at Bowie?"

• • • •

DEFEAT: Anne Morgan and Mrs. W. K. Vanderbilt are sponsoring the Dance Internationale which will be held at Radio City. Their talent scout, assigned to locate some braves to do the Indian dances, discovered ten Indians in Trenton who agreed to do the dancing and were paid $10 as advance to come to N. Y. for rehearsals . . . When the braves failed to appear, the talent scout went searching for them, and finally contacted their spokesman, who explained that with the $10 the Indians had purchased a trading post . . . Mrs. Vanderbilt sent the scout to find that "trading post." He found it at the outskirts of Trenton—a hot-dog stand.

• • • •

TRIUMPH: A few years ago Playwright Paul Sifton and his wife wrote a play called "1931." This was the first play on unemployment, and the authors lamented the situation and the inability to find some measure of relief therefor . . . At the end of this year New York State will issue $10,000,000 in checks, under the unemployment insurance law. The checks will be signed by that same Paul Sifton, now New York State deputy commissioner.

• • • •

CHATTER: Alec Woolcott has a 10 per cent interest in the dramatization of "Of Mice and Men." . . . Carol Case, whose father owns the Algonquin, will be the new drama critic in the next issue of Judge. . . . The CIO has signed 150 employes in the New York department of M-G-M. . . . Now that Frank Capra has settled his differences with Columbia, he'll get the coveted assignment to screen "You Can't Take It With You." . . . Franklin D. Roosevelt picked the type and helped design the title page for his new book, which Random House will publish. . . . Frank Capra took a plane back to Hollywood mysteriously Monday night, using the name of his valet, Saunders, to get the reservation.

• • • •

CHANGE: Because of the success of last Sunday's golf match between John Montague and Babe Ruth, a promoter approached both men and suggested a tour of these matches. "It'll be great, and we'll pack 'em," the promoter enthused. "And just imagine—we'll make the billing 'The New Montague and Capulet.'" . . . "Oh, no," Ruth protested. "I spent 25 years in baseball getting people to know my name—and now you want to change it?"

• • • •

FEAR: The newspapers reported the exodus of New York's mob-guys who had fled to California. . . . On the day before election, a political figure talked with one of these gentry. "If Dewey is defeated for District Attorney," the politician promised, "you and I will celebrate by taking a trip to Atlantic City." "And if he wins?" was the question. "If he wins," was the reply, "then you and I will take a trip to Europe!"

The Washington Post Sports

*X WASHINGTON: SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 20, 1937 19

This Morning

Came Nov. 20, 1937, and It's Your Guess.

By Shirley Povich.

Fast taking root as Washington's finest, most attractive football game is the Georgetown-Maryland rivalry. Four years ago, Washington fans had abandoned hope that the two colleges, coldly distant since 1907, would ever clash again on the gridiron. The age-old clamor for the game subsided to intermittent peeps.

POVICH.

And then, suddenly, in the fall of '33, differences between Georgetown and Maryland, both imaginary and real, were healed. Calmly, President H. C. Byrd, of Marylnad, announced that a game had been arranged for 1934. At Georgetown, Graduate Manager H. Gabriel Murphy took a bow for negotiating the game that had defied previous Georgetown managers. Wildly, Washington fans greeted the news.

On November 24, 1934, after a 27-year lapse, Georgetown and Maryland teams faced each other across the scrimmage line at Byrd Stadium. But in the stands were only 8,000 fans, a disappointing turnout. Georgetown and Maryland officials had over-rated the game, bungled the business by charging $3.30 for most of the seats.

Maryland Was Favorite.

Georgetown, under young Coach Jack Hagerty, came up to the game with one of the finest records ever compiled by a Hilltop team. Only one team — Richmond — had been able to score against G. U. Only Richmond had been able to defeat Georgetown that season. A tie with New York University and a 9-to-0 defeat of Manhattan were proud boasts of that 1934 Georgetown eleven.

Maryland, too, was having one of its finest seasons. Florida, Virginia and V. P. I. fell before the Old Liners. Navy was held to a 16-to-13 victory. Indiana had been able to beat Maryland, 17 to 14. But Maryland's opposition had been better than Georgetown's. Coach Jack Faber's team went into the game as a pronounced 8-to-5 favorite.

In the first quarter, Georgetown's Parcells threw a pass intended for Joe Meglen, deep in Maryland territory. Alert Norwood Sothoron snatched the ball on his own 25-yard line, started a sensational gallop up the field. On the Georgetown two-yard, Joe Kelleher, a guard, hauled Sothoron down. It was a 73-yard run.

On second down, Sachs plunged through the Georgetown line for a touchdown. But off-side play nullified the goal. On fourth down, Maryland still was two-yards distant from the goal. On a trick reverse, Jack Stonebraker was handed the ball, slipped through Georgetown's right tackle for the touchdown.

Thereafter, Maryland played safe for three quarters. Georgetown in the first half made a first down on the Maryland seven-yard line, was forced to yield the ball. At the finish, Maryland had 11 first downs to Georgetown's nine, and a 6-0 victory.

Came November, 1935.

Late November, 1935, found Georgetown and Maryland lined up at Griffith Stadium. A biting cold day had kept the attendance figures to 10,000. The game lacked a pronounced favorite. Maryland had licked St. John's V. P. I., Florida and Virginia, had lost, 33-0, to North Carolina, and, 13-7 to Indiana. Georgetown had beaten Roanoke, Miami, Richmond and Manhattan, had lost, 7-0, to Albright in the opening game, and 7-6, to New York U.

It was, supposedly. Georgetown with its Tom Keating and his tricky laterals, against the talented Bill Guckeyson, Maryland's triple-threat ace. On the fourth play of the game, Maryland took a 6-0 lead. Guckeyson showed his heels to Georgetown's right end and Georgetown's secondary defense, swept down the field, flirted with the sidelines, and scored standing up on a 50-yard gallop from scrimmage.

Their song was "The Old Blue and Gray Ain't What It Used to Be." Bowl Aspirants In Tests Today

St. Mary's and Penn State to Shoot Works Against Pitt, Fordham.

By Alan Gould.
Associated Press Sports Editor.

New York, Nov. 19.—The "salvage squads" of collegiate football have their last big chance tomorrow, on most major fronts, to blast the sectionally in trenched powers and, for good measure, to toss a few hand grenades into the realm of postseason "bowl" speculation . . .

Except in the Old South, where the big guns are holding their fire until Thanksgiving Day, this Saturday's warfare can either settle or scramble most of the major gridiron sources of argument.

Football's best known and most traditional rivalries will be involved as Yale battles Harvard in quest of "Ivy League" as well as "Big Three" honors, the Big Ten Conference season closes in the Midwest and California meets the challenge of Stanford in the West Coast's annual "big game," with the conference title and Rose Bowl nomination at stake.

In these, as well as other superheated sectional matches, favorites face football's best-known brand of trouble: the "underdog" with no regard for past performances or the form charts.

Along the Eastern front, for example, Fordham's unbeaten Rams meet St. Mary's, which has everything to gain and nothing to lose by shooting the works, while Syracuse faces its old jinx, Colgate, in the renewal of a rivalry famous for upsets. The same situation applies to Columbia's bid to salvage some prestige at Dartmouth's expense; to Penn State's challenge to mighty Pittsburgh, and Temple's chance to overthrow unbeaten Villanova.

Minnesota can clinch the Big Ten crown by beating Wisconsin but the Badgers have primed all their weapons for this one. Northwestern, too, is in the underdog spot against Notre Dame. Their series has been marked by bad luck for the favorite two years in a row.

Coast critics expect California to come through against its old rival at Palo Alto, before the day's biggest crowd of 90,000, but it's a matter of record that the Indians twice have scalped the Golden Bears when the latter appeared headed for the top of the heap. It's no spot for California to take anything for granted.

There will be at least a half-dozen sellouts tomorrow otherwise, including 58,000, the biggest Harvard-Yale crowd at Cambridge in eight years; 33,000 for Syracuse-Colgate; and 47,000 for Notre Dame-Northwestern at Evanston. Close to 75,000 are expected to see Ohio State and Michigan at Ann Arbor.

Here's the outlook from this corner (crowd estimates in parentheses):

Harvard-Yale (58,000)—Only one point separated these "Ivy" rivals

Hoya Law Alumni In Rousing Rally

Confidence of a victory this afternoon was the keynote of a rousing rally held by the Georgetown University Law School Alumni last night at the annual smoker at the Mayflower Hotel on the eve of the Georgetown-Maryland game.

Several hundred Georgetown alumni who reasserted their confidence in Coach Jack Hagerty, were addressed by the Rev. Arthur A. O'Leary, president of Georgetown; the Rev. Francis E. Lucey, regent of the law school; Joseph A. Cantrell, president of the Georgetown Law School Alumni; Coach Hagerty, Bob Gormley and Harry Costello, former Georgetown stars; Judge Fred Nielsen, former Georgetown coach, and Shirley Povich, of The Post sports staff.

Central Upsets Tech High, 13-7

Ickes and Jones Star as 4,000 Watch Series Battle.

By Jack Munhall.

Fullback Bill Ickes and Center Charley Jones, a pair of youngsters as unlike physically as Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde, merged into a smooth, powerful combination to spur Central's eleven to a surprising 13-7 victory over Tech yesterday in Central stadium.

Despite the raw, rainy weather, more than 4,000 rooters huddled in the stands.

Central took second place in the interhigh series and boosted its margin in the series with Tech. Central now has won 18 of the 35 meetings. Tech has taken 14, while 4 ended in ties.

It was a vastly improved Central outfit that whipped Tech yesterday. Ickes, a slender, swivel-hipped speedster, and Jones, a burly, bow-legged veteran, never showed to better advantage. Ickes almost singlehandedly made possible the two touchdowns, while Jones spent half the game in Tech's backfield. He made tackles with such frequency that he was getting credit for stopping Tech runners even when he was not near them.

Central struck for its first score before the initial quarter was half over. After an exchange of kicks gave it the ball on Tech's 40, Halfback Lou Chacos reeled off two first downs, to place the ball on the 21. There the irrepressible Ickes joined Chacos and the pair advanced the leather to the 1, where Chacos cracked right guard for the touchdown. Bob Goldsworthy missed a dropkick for the point.

Tech made its only six-pointer on a thrilling 82-yard off-tackle jaunt by Fullback Henry Rassier. Backed to its own 18 by Goldsworthy's lengthy kicking, Tech was decidedly wavering on its collective heels. But suddenly Rassier broke through five or six tacklers after he had apparently been stopped for a loss, reversed his field and outdistanced

Ancient Foes Renew Feud At Stadium

Marylanders Will Enter Fray as Favorites; Game at 2 P. M.

By Lewis F. Atchison.

Georgetown's football rivalry with Maryland, a rare old sports relic from the gay nineties, will be dusted off again this afternoon at Griffith Stadium where the District's two top-ranking teams meet in the fourth game of their "modern" series.

Upward of 20,000 fans, their support about evenly divided between the combatants, are expected to witness the game, tenth in a series inaugurated back in the pre-Spanish War days of '97, and abruptly terminated in 1907. Maryland holds a 2-1 edge in games played since relations were renewed in 1934, but the Hoyas boast an all-time margin of seven wins against two defeats. There have been no ties.

It will be a fitting climax to one of the dullest collegiate campaigns the city ever has witnessed, although threat of inclement weather clouds the prospect of a completely successful afternoon. But the weather man half-heartedly promises clear skies accompanied by frigid blasts today, after a night of rain and sno wflurries.

Field May Be Fast.

The gridiron has been covered with a tarpaulin since Thursday night, and the field is expected to be fairly fast. Maryland will enter the fray a 6-5 choice, although there is actually little to choose between the teams. In the event of an unexpectedly heavy field odds on the Terps, because of burly Jim Meade's presence in the backfield, will rise considerably.

Unlike its three immediate predecessors, today's game will not be a test of Maryland's potent offense against Georgetown's stubborn defense. Georgetown has developed an attack that looks as good as Maryland's in its last three games, and the Terps, on the other hand, cannot be accused of having a poor defense. The final score, however, threatens to be closer than your hair.

Both squads are loaded with new strategy for this particular game and will delve into their bags of tricks frequently throughout the afternoon. It is hardly likely or possible that the fray will follow a set pattern. The boys will be kicking, running and passing on fourth down as well as first, pulling no punches, and scattering orthodox football to the four winds.

Maryland's hopes are vested in an "iron-man" combination of some 15 players who have borne the brunt of the burden since the opening game of the season. But the Terps' principal hopes are intrusted to their triple threat ace, Jumbo Jim Meade, line-crasher par excellence, and blonde Charley Weidinger, passing field general.

But the College Park clan has an added scoring threat in the size 12 brogans of Pershing Mondorff, sophomore field goal kicker, whose unerring toe accounted for two victories earlier in the season. If Maryland's running and passing game bogs down within 40-yards of Georgetown's goal posts, the tall Pennsylvanian may step up and help his mates to three points.

Meade, however, is the most dangerous person in the backfield from a purely psychological basis. He was the goat of last year's game, dropping a pass from Bill Guckeyson on the goal line that would have given Maryland a second touch-

Fones' Boot Gives Devitt 9-6 Victory

By Bob Garrison.

The accurate right arm and leg of Halfback Lee Fones twice propelled a football into the damp air at American University's field yesterday, and with each descent Devitt Prep posted a score to defeat its traditional rival, Bullis Prep, 9-6.

First a touchdown pass, then a field goal from the talented fingers and toes of the former Alexandria High School star were combined with a series of stanch goal-line stands to avenge a 13-6 defeat suffered at the hands of Bullis last season. Four times the Devitt forward wall repulsed Bullis threats to protect its slim lead.

Before nearly 1,000 spectators who stood in the rain to watch one of the hardest fought contests in local school-boy ranks this season, Devitt took advantage of two breaks to record its winning points. Bullis, meanwhile, suffered goal-line fright for three periods until finally, on its fifth visit into deep Devitt territory, it tallied on a pass in the closing minutes of the game.

What turned out to be the winning score of the battle between the West Point and Annapolis Preparatory Schools was a demonstration of a mathematical axiom, with which every service cadet is familiar—"a straight line is the shortest distance between two points."

Standing on his own 22-yard line early in the third period, with his team-mates in possession of a one-touchdown lead, Fones, 165-pound aspirant to the Military Academy, sank his mud-covered cleats into the soggy leather and sent it spinning through the goal posts on a low, end-over-end trajectory.

That field goal, unusual as it was in a prep school game, came after Ernest Raulin, tackle, had slid onto a Bullis fumble to give Devitt possession on the Bullis 25-yard line. After a first down had been nullified by a series of losses, it was then that Fones scored his game-winning three points.

The Devitt touchdown, scored early in the second period, came after an identical recovery of Chet Lee's fumble by Fones on the Bullis 25-yard line. Moving 3 yards nearer the Bullis end of the muddy field on a line plunge, Fones then faded back and threw a 22-yard pass to Roddy Clay, who took it in the end zone for the goal.

Taking the opening kick-off near midfield, Bullis promptly marched to the 6-yard line, with Butch Werner and Chet Lee carrying the ball through the tackles and around the ends. First down at that point netted little, however, as Devitt braced and held for downs on straight thrusts. Although Bullis came knocking twice again in the same period and one in the fourth,

Johnnies Beat Indians, 25-6

By Perry Wilkinson.

After winning four straight games, Anacostia High School's first football team lost its first game of the season to St. John's in an easy fashion yesterday, 25 to 6, on a rain-soaked field at Eastern Stadium.

Before 500 spectators, the Indians' offense was stopped cold by a powerful Cadet line that yielded to only one tally. That was after a blocked punt had been scooped up out of the muddy turf.

The Johnnies scored in every period except the third, to exhibit an offense that to date had not been encountered by the Anacostians. With Rinaldo and Mulvihill hitting the line with the power of a 2-ton truck, and behind a line that was continuously opening holes large enough to send the same truck through, the contest was never in reaching distance of the Indians after the first six minutes of the second quarter.

Bob (Flash) Gordon, the sturdy and steady little runner of the Indians, was not the dangerous lad he had been in the previous battles. His folowers may argue that he was slowed by the wet field, but that is not the whole story. Time and time again the St. John's line sifted through to drop him in his tracks. The Johnnies' line was far too superior to give the Indian backs a chance.

This superiority was shown in the opening minutes of play when Daly broke through the line to recover a fumble on Anacostia's 30-yard line. Gallagher and Rinaldo lugged the leather to the 10 and on the next play Rinaldo drove straight

Jim Bottomley Is Given Release By Browns; Succeeded Hornsby

By the Associated Press.

St. Louis, Nov. 19.—One of the most popular players ever to wear a St. Louis baseball uniform—Sunny Jim Bottomley—was out of baseball today.

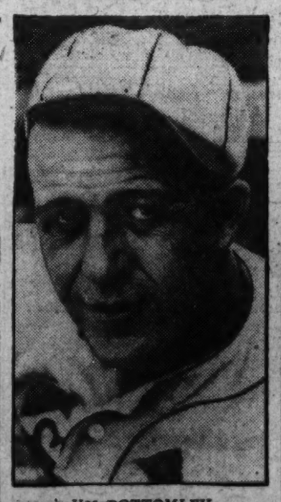
Bottomley, who succeeded another baseball great, Rogers Hornsby, as manager of the revamped St. Louis Browns during the middle of last season, was given his unconditional release. His discharge left the Brownies the only major league club without a manager for 1938.

Serving as coach and substitute first baseman when the managerial job was turned over to him, Jim naturally was included among those considered to lead the club again in 1938. But Gabby Street, appointed coach under Bottomley, now apparently holds the inside track.

Donald Barres, president of the Browns, tonight indicated Street's appointment would be forthcoming when he asserted:

"I have not said Street will be the next manager, but unless something unlooked for turns up in the near future he will be the leader."

Bottomley said he has no immediate plans for continuing in baseball.



JIM BOTTOMLEY.

"I have received no direct offers," the smiling 37-year-old veteran added. "Only a few nibbles, and I can't tell what I'll do until something develops. But that's all in the game. He asserted he does not intend to attend the baseball meetings this winter.

Before the close of last season it was announced Jim had applied for the job of managing the Cincinnati Reds, after Charley Dressen had been released. But he later declared he was "just joking."

Whether or not Sunny Jim passes from the spotlight, the "gentleman farmer," of Bourbon, Mo., has earned a permanent place in baseball history.

Bottomley joined the Cardinals in 1922 and played first base during four of their five pennant-winning years. He batted .367 in 1925 and was voted the National League's most valuable player in 1928, batting .325, to help them to the second pennant.

After the 1932 season he was traded to Cincinnati for Estel Crabtree and Owen Carroll. Then, in March, 1936, Hornsby let Johnny Burnett go to the Reds and brought Smiling Jim back to St. Louis.

Bowie 'Ringer' Rumor Blows Up; Winner Proves to Be Jesting Lady

In This Corner

He Learned of Pros From Grange.

By Jack Cuddy.

Copyright, 1937, by the United Press.

New York, Nov. 19.—The Galloping Ghost's predictions are coming true:

I am one of the last, unquestionably, to be convinced that Red Grange knew what he was talking about when he said that professional football would thrive and blossom into a compelling sport that ultimately would challenge the college game in crowd appeal, public interest and newspaper space.

I can't even remember the year—to say nothing of the day—that Grange and I sat in his hotel room and he made an open field run for the commercial game. It must have been six or seven years ago. Maybe it was eight. I paid little attention to his predictions at the time. I figured he was merely blowing up a business that was contributing to his immediate wants.

But never can I forget the face of the Galloping Ghost of old Illinois as he advised me to watch the pro game. I was ultra-skeptical. Particularly when Red insisted that ultimately—around 1950—the pro game would be played indoors, inside great specially built stadia. Red said the professional owners would build those indoor stadia to eliminate the risk of weather—the only gamble to the sport.

Maybe I wrote a story about Grange's predictions, at the time. I don't remember. I know this: Since then I have paid virtually no attention to the professional sport. Maybe it's because I love the glamour, the spectacle, the tradition and the drama of college football. I concentrated on Alma Mater on the gridiron.

This concentration caused me more and more embarrassment this year. I did well during discussions of collegiate gridirons. Unfortunately, the conversation invariably shifted to the professionals. They were talking about the Bears, Giants, Redskins, Packers, etc., and I was just a bench warmer. That's the situation in New York. You can't talk about football for 5 minutes but what they put on the professional record.

And the New York newspapers—it's amazing! Pick up those Monday morning sheets and all over the front sports pages they've plastered robust stories of Sunday's pro games. Those Monday Morning Quarterback stories analyzing the significance of college play are shunted into the background. Commercial football is here—in a big way.

Most folks in the United States never went to college. But, for years, all of us have been following the college games—betting on them, pulling for them and arguing about them. The unofficial alumni always worked over-time. But now the great American middle class is being weaned away from the rah-rah games. Now the butcher boys, grocery clerks, foundry workers, coal miners, mechanics and messenger lads are affiliating themselves with professional teams.

Careful Miss Is Second; Wild Count Wins Final Event.

By Walter Haight.
A Staff Correspondent.

Bowie, Md., Nov. 19.—For some reason, the judges called for the camera at the finish of today's feature race and spoiled my chance to write a story entitled "Once Upon a Time an Inside Horse Won a Photo Finish." However, there was no question about this inside horse for W. E. Johnson's White Sand won by at least a head in the 1 1-16 miles contest, labeled the Piankatank Handicap, in honor of all the beaten favorites at the meeting.

While the negative was being developed, backers of White Sand went under the stands to form lines and collect a $12.40 mutuel. Careful Miss, in the silks of W. Elliott, closed with a rush to be second to the winning St. Germain's filly. A length and a half farther back came W. W. Vaughan's Mr. Canron to be third. A group of six were among the "also rans."

Jockey Eddie DeCamillis rode the winner very confidently, allowing her to almost walk going to the first turn. Gradually he put her to a drive and she gained steadily. White Cockade and Marfeu set the early pace and it was around that pair that White Sand went to take the lead approaching the stretch.

Pressed by Careful Miss.

In the final sixteenth, DeCamillis had to ride as if his very life was at stake, for Careful Miss came on with a rush that would have won in a few more strides.

White Sand was clocked over the fast track in 1:49 3-5 for the mile and a sixteenth. Rain began falling just before the feature, making a cold, penetrating afternoon more uncomfortable for the crowd of 7,000.

There was a rumor that a "ringer" had won the third race. The horse was Jesting Lady, a 3-year-old owned and trained by M. Nelson. However, the filly was finally identified. A ticket seller in the clubhouse reported that an unidentified man bet $500 win, $500 place and $500 to show. It also was said that the same man bought a handful of daily double tickets on the winning combination. If he did, he has a hatful of money tonight, for the double paid $240.30 for each $2 investment. Nice work, if you can get it.

Camelot, a paddock tip, turned in an impressive victory in the first race, leading nine other maiden juveniles to the wire after a sprint of 6 furlongs. Nick Wall rushed the Sir Galahad III filly to the front after the opening strides, and had her there to the finish line. She downed Fine as Silk by a length and a half. Heraldic was third. Camelot paid a $7.90 mutuel.

Deep End Makes Good.

The Paragon Stable's Deep End made good in the role of a $3.60 favorite in the second race, holding sway from flag-fall to finish in another 6-furlong sprint. Stephen Jay was second, beaten by two lengths, with Noticing third. A field of six competed.

Jesting Lady proved the winner of a rough-and-tumble race that marked the third race. At least four horses had no chance due to Commish Geary crowding the field at the first turn. The stewards were on the job, however, and disqualified Commish Geary, which finished third behind Gold Cross. The ruling gave Ivory Tip, one of the bothered horses, third money. Jesting Lady, ridden by Ken McCombs, paid $15.

Howard Bruce's Mattapony, winner several times this season at long odds, gave his backers the jitters today before taking a photo decision from Max B. The $2.80 choice was credited with a head the best of it and was "straight as a string" at the end. Gramercy was a distant third in the vest-pocket field of six.

Anne G., owned by George Mitchell, won her third straight race in the sixth event, finishing with speed in reserve and in front of Light Chatter and Continuity. The winner, ridden by Jackie Westrope, paid a $7.50 mutuel.

Paying a $26.60 mutuel, W. Elliott's Wild Count won the day's finale. Scudder and Glastonbury were second and third in the field of 11.

'Lonesome' John Munski Leads Two Milers Again

Columbia, Mo., Nov. 19.—"Lonesome" John Munski, University of Missouri sophomore track sensation, continued his winning ways last Saturday when he led his own two mile teammates and runners from Central College and Springfield Teachers to the tape in 9:44.1.

Munski has now finished way out in front against runners from Kansas State, Kansas, Nebraska, and Iowa State. He hasn't been forced to "turn on the steam" in any meet.

Finishing second to Munski Saturday was Bench of Springfield, with Collins of Missouri third, and Rucker of Missouri, fourth.

Since Springfield entered only four men and Central only two, there were no team scores.

Hargrave Is Beaten.

Danville, Va., Nov. 19.—Childress Home from Winston-Salem downed Hargrave Military Academy in a game played in the rain by a score of 32 to 0.

—Dear Al:—The jockeys here are shaking in their boots. Joe Lynch, who rode earlier in the week, complained of being ill yesterday and after being examined it was found that Lynch was suffering from scarlet fever. Now the jockeys who sat in the room with him all afternoon are wondering if they will develop the disease. Lynch is in the Sydenham Hospital in Baltimore. Horsemen are warned not to ship horses to Florida without stall accommodations. Every stall within 50 miles of Miami has been engaged. R. C. Thatcher has shipped 12 horses to California. Mrs. P. Reuter's Actress broke a bone in her foot and has been retired from racing. She probably will be sold as a brood mare. This gives her plenty of excuse for that poor race at Laurel. Pat McDermott, who suffered a broken collarbone in yesterday's spill, leaves tomorrow for his home in Glen Cove, L. I. Thirty-seven horses are on the schooling list here, with Newark Inactive and Unselfish latest additions. One of the Benningites phoned me this morning about the trainers' excuses and came up with a fair one. He said that in France, where all races are on the turf, an owner asked a trainer why his horse ran so poorly and the trainer replied, "Why your horse was nibbling grass at

Poe and Harrison Tie at 142 for Mid-South Golf Title at Pinehurst

Southerners Will Decide Issue Today

Loving in Third Place; 5 Pros in Deadlock for Fourth Spot.

By the Associated Press.

Pinehurst, N. C., Nov. 19.—Two young Southerners, freshmen among golf's professionals, turned in sub-par performances today and tied for first place in the Midsouth Tournament, distancing a starting field of 96 professionals.

Henry Clay Poe, of Durham, N. C., fired a 70, 2 under par, in his first professional tournament effort, for a tie with E. J. (Dutch) Harrison, of Little Rock, who registered a pair of 71s in the 36-hole event. They will play off at 18 holes tomorrow afternoon.

Poe, 22-year-old former Duke University star and son of a Durham professional, equaled par in yesterday's opening round in laying the groundwork for his 142.

Benny Loving, of Rumson, N. J., added a 73 today to his opening 70, for a 143 and third place.

Bracketed in a five-way tie for fourth position at 144 were Tony Penna, of Dayton, Ohio; long-hitting Jimmy Thomson, of Shawnee-on-Delaware; Lawson Little, of San Francisco; Harry Cooper, of Chicopee, Mass., and Tony Manero, of Salem, Mass., former National Open champion.

Harrison, who has had four years as a tournament golfer and who last week won the Mississippi Open, had six birdies and was over par on five holes. He came to the home hole needing a par for the tie, and did it with two long shots and a pair of putts.

Poe and Harrison will play for first and second money of $250 and $200. Other winners were loving, $150; Thomson, Manero, Penna, Little and Cooper, $75 each; and Horton Smith (Chicopee), Frank Moore (New York), and Tommy Armour (Chicago), all with 145s, each $33.

down and clinched victory, and later having a punt blocked which was converted into the tying touchdown. Meade will be playing his heart out to atone for those unfortunate breaks, and he'll be extraordinarily hard to stop.

Georgetown's outstanding ball carrier appears to be Joe Mellendick, sensational sophomore, who has come into prominence in the Hoyas' last three games. Mellendick is the climax runner Jack Hagerty has needed—but never before had, in the five years he has toiled at rebuilding Georgetown's shattered gridiron fortunes. Weighing a scant 155 pounds, Mellendick can do everything and do it well, particularly run the ball, and he adds a note of deception to the attack that bodes no good for the Terrapins.

Others to Watch.

But "Li'l Joe" is not the only lad Maryland must watch, for Tommy Keating and Joe Keegin, the latter a Washington boy, seem to play better in this game than any other. "Bull" Darmohray, a newcomer to Georgetown's backfield, will give the Terp line plenty of trouble, and Charley Wychunas, Elmer Moulin and Paul Sheeran, all of whom will see action, will be doing the same.

As for Georgetown's line, well, it lost only one man from last year and doesn't seem to have suffered to any great extent. It appears to be fully as strong as Maryland's, which has some good men, including Bill Wolfe, Mike Surgent and Bob Darmey. The lines are fairly evenly matched.

Georgetown's reserves are superior in numbers and quality to those of its opponent, but the Terps' "iron-men" have done nobly in past games and will play over their collective heads today. Reserves may hold the key to the ultimate outcome, possibly the lines, but the most logical solution sems to lie in the backfield.

It looks like a toss-up.

last year, when Harvard ran Yale ragged in the second half. The Crimson, much improved, has a real chance if it gets a few breaks. The main problem is to check Clint Frank, who makes his farewell to the gridiron wars. Yale.

Stanford - California (90,000)—Stamford beat Washington, which tied California, which doesn't prove anything except that you get dizzy figuring comparative scores. On the assumption the Golden Bears have had their one off day and, furthermore, pack far too much punch for even Stanford's stout defense, the choice goes to California.

Fordham - St. Mary's (40,000)—Not even Slip Madigan's colorful personality can offset the fact it's been a bad year for the Gaels. St. Mary's has scored only nine points in its last four games. Fordham, which didn't need the extra week it took to prepare for this game, should win handily.

Minnesota - Wisconsin (47,000)—May be the spot for an upset but the Gophers have been putting on the pressure every other week and are due again tomorrow. Minnesota.

Pitt May Be Harassed.

Pittsburgh - Penn State (20,000)—State's Rabbit backs may harass the Panther, who has been showing signs of the strain. Pitt.

Syracuse-Colgate (33,000) — If there's anything in the law of averages, Syracuse should win after 13 years of frustration, but wily Andy Kerr has his Red Raiders primed for their best game. Hunch players may take Colgate, but the form chart here points to Syracuse.

Michigan-Ohio State (75,000) — They're saying the rival coaching systems are "on the spot" here. Michigan has been scraping along, making points after touchdown go a long way, but Ohio State is the choice.

Indiana-Purdue (25,000)—The Old Oaken Bucket for Indiana.

Nebraska-Iowa (32,000)—Nebraska has been crossing up the sharps all season with a defense that reflects great credit on the coaching of the old Army man, Biff Jones. Iowa has a big chance here, but Nebraska, rated off its showing against Pitt, figures to win.

St. Alban's Lightweights Beat Guilman by 35-0

St. Alban's 90-pound eleven, undefeated this season by a local team, yesterday traveled to Baltimore to score a 35-to-0 victory over Guilman School.

Lucas and Trimble, a pair of fast-stepping backs, ran wild to enable the locals to win easily. Trimble scored four times on runs of 70, 35, 20 and 55 yards, while Lucas tallied on a 20-yard center rush. The seventh touchdown was made by Wolcott on a 40-yard end dash.

it remained like the song would have the river: away from the Devitt door until the fifth invasion in the closing minutes.

The touchdown followed three first-period failures by Bullis to score after it had reached the 6-yard, 10-yard and 12-yard lines on respective marches.

Marching from its own 45-yard line to the 10 on a series of short passes, Lee to Williamson and Williamson to Correll, Bullis scored its lone touchdown when Lee chucked the wet ball to Correll, who took it on the 5 and plowed through the mire to the goal line.

G.U. Prep Beats Loyola by 6 to 0

The accurate passing of Captain and Fullback Ed Cummings enabled Georgetown Prep's eleven to score a 6-to-0 victory over Loyola, Baltimore, in their annual game played yesterday at Garrett Park.

After the teams had battled with score for three quarters, Cummings unleashed two forward passes to Charley Devine and Tom Graham to produce 46 yards and place the ball on Loyola's 6. Graham plunged over for the touchdown on his second crack at the line.

Loyola threatened several times, but was halted largely through the great defensive efforts of Reds Harper, one of the greatest guards in the Prep's history. After Georgetown had scored, Loyola drove hard in an attempt to deadlock the count, but was held for downs on the Prep's 15-yard line.

Williams, a guard, showed up well for the losers, while Cummings received valuable assistance from Graham and Harry Lee, a halfback.

Adamick Wins by Kayo.

Detroit, Nov. 19 (AP).—Jimmy Adamick, the young Michigan slugger who moved to Detroit from Midland recently, evened things with Maxie Rosenbloom tonight by scoring a second-round knockout at Olympia Stadium.

D.C. Gridmen Worked Hard

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Cleveland, Nov. 19.—Coach Ray Flaherty, of the Washington Redskins, continued to drive his squad through long practice sessions today as Sunday's game with Cleveland's Rams neared.

Flaherty, still irked by the Redskins' set-back at Pittsburgh last Sunday, all week has been impressing upon his team the importance of Sunday's game, pointing out that defeat will virtually eliminate the Washington club from the Eastern championship.

In striking contrast to last week's headquarters at Pittsburgh, where wives and sweethearts of many regulars on the Redskin squad had also converged, the Washington camp here lacked any note of femininity. Coach Flaherty, following the Pittsburgh debacle, banned all further family reunions during the playing season.

Flaherty is exceedingly wary of the Rams despite the latters' consistent failures this season. The Redskins' line hass been weakened by the injuries of Charlie Malone, end, and Charlie Barber, tackle.

Aware that the Cleveland club has been vulnerable to a forward-passing attack all season, Flaherty is expected to send Slingin' Sammy Baugh into the Redskins' backfield at the outset in an attempt to compile a comfortable lead. Cliff Battles, Don Irwin and Ernie Pinckert will round out the Redskins' starting backfield.

Gallaudet Entrains To Play Hoffstra

Gallaudet University's football team entrained for New York City yesterday and its last football game. The clash with Hoffstra College will ring the requiem on football at the Kendall Green School as there will be no team there next season.

It is the last chances for victory in the football annals of Gallaudet, which extend over a long period of years and mark the days when Gallaudet played Georgetown, George Washington, Maryland, and Navy.

Riggs, Merrick Win Thrillers

Riggs Bank and Merrick Boys Club staged a thriller last night in the Southeast Community Center Basketball League at Hine Junior High, Merrick winning out in the last few minutes of play, 28 to 24. Chick Hollidge, former Eastern High star, led in the scoring with 10 points. In the opening game National Savings and Trust trimmed Procurement, 33 to 16, Chilcotte getting 13 points.

ended, Georgetown began an advance from its 37-yard line. Twelve yards from the goal, Keating knifed through tackle for a four-yard gain, then on the same play lateraled the ball to Herron, Maryland, napping on the play, yielded the tying touchdown, raised thanks when Meglen's kick for the seventh point went wide.

Out of the dressing rooms came the two teams for the second half. On his own ten-yard line, Guckeyson, son of a circus acrobat, caught Meglen's kick-off. Ten seconds later, he was crossing the goal-line standing up after a 90-yard dash through the entire Georgetown team. It was Maryland, 12; Georgetown, 6—the final score.

'36 Game Is Sellout.

Back to Byrd Stadium at College Park went the Georgetown-Maryland game last November. Frank Dobson was the new Maryland head coach. Georgetown had beaten Delaware, Cincinnati, Bucknell, Shenandoah, lost only to Manhattan, tied New York U. 7-7. Maryland had won from St. John's, V. P. I., Virginia, Syracuse and Richmond, had lost to North Carolina, Florida and V. M. I. But, on the strength of its opposition, Maryland was a 6-5 favorite.

Georgetown-Maryland games had begun to take on intense interest. Byrd Stadium filled early, spilled an overflow onto the sidelines. Thousands of eager ticket seekers had been turned away. For the first time, the game had caught on. Fourteen thousand were in the stands.

It was, supposedly, Georgetown's aggressive line against Maryland's ever-threatening Guckeyson. The first quarter produced no score. In the second quarter, Guckeyson returned a Georgetown punt 15 yards to Maryland's 45. On the next play, Ellinger threw a pass over the center of the Georgetown line, Guckeyson snatched it on the run, wrenched away from Keating's tackle, galloped 40 yards for a touchdown. Gormely's wobbly kick failed to add the extra point.

Five minutes before the finish, coming events began to cast their shadows. The Georgetown line was spilling Maryland backs for consistent losses. Lineman Suker charged through, tossed Ellinger for an 11-yard set-back. On the next play, Guckeyson attempted a shovel pass to Meade and lost 5 yards. To his own 17-yard line, Meade dropped back to punt.

Barging through the Maryland line came big Al Vaccaro, Georgetown tackle, to fling himself into the arc of Meade's boot almost as it left his foot. Off Vacarro's chest the ball bounded, 15 yards from the goal. Maury Nee, Georgetown end, snatched it up, scurried across the goal line. Valiquette place kicked the goal-conversion, Georgetown won, 7 to 6.

through center for the first 6-pointer of the game.

Immediately following the kick-off, St. John's line again proved strong when it broke through to block a punt that led to the second score. On the second play of the series, the same lad, Rinaldo, a big back with a big punch, drove into the center of the pile and before he was brought to earth was resting comfortably across the pay-dirt striper. A pass, Gallagher to Neuland, was good for the extra point.

After a change of punts and several line plunges on the part of the St. John's backs, during the beginning of the second period the ball came to rest on the 25-yard line. At this point Mulvihill, on a reverse tackle play, fought and wiggled his way for a touchdown. The scoring was over until the third quarter, when O'Connor took a lateral from Gallagher and raced around right end for the last tally of the day.

Central Beats Tech by 13-7

Jack Belote then made his sixth conversion in eight series tries, placekicking high through the bars to send Tech ahead 7-6.

But Ickes came back in the same period to imitate Rassier's run in every way but length. Central was on the Tech 28 and making little progress when Ickes shot through the line, spun away from several clutching hands and raced through at least three other defenders to cross the goal line.

Harvey Steiner hurried into the game and drop-kicked the extra point.

drive fizzled on the Tech 6-inch line when the McKinley lads stopped Ickes and Chacos after a first down had been gained on the 2-yard line. Several other times Central drove deep into Tech territory, but always something happened to thwart its scoring bids.

Goldsworthy contributed in great measure to the Central victory. His kicking was almost perfect. Twice his kicks rolled out within Tech's 10-yard line. His performance in out-punting Belote, considered the best kicker in the series, was something of a surprise.

Wheat Prices Decline With Weak Stocks

Lack of Export Demand Contributes to Drop of 2⅛ Cents a Bushel.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Nov. 19.—Jolted by tumbles of securities and by nearly complete disappearance of North American wheat export business, Chicago wheat values fell 2⅛ cents a bushel today.

Southern hemisphere crop reports, especially from Australia were optimistic, including an estimate that Australia has produced 13,000,000 bushels more wheat than last year and of better quality. Rising temperatures in Argentina, less unfavorable for crops, counted also on the side of lower quotations here. Season new bottom price records for corn added to the downward trend of wheat.

At the close Chicago wheat futures were 1⅝@2⅛ cents under yesterday's finish, December 90@90⅛, May 90@90¾, July 84½@84¾; corn ⅛@⅜ off, December 53⅛@53¼, May 56¼@56¾; oats ⅛@¼ down, rye showing ⅝@1⅜ drop, and provisions lower 12 to 27 cents.

Baltimore Finances Analyzed by Bankers

Such favorable factors in the financial situation of Baltimore as a relatively moderate debt, self-supporting character of over one-quarter of the outstanding debt, maintenance of sinking funds above actuarial requirements and an efficient tax collection system, which continue to uphold that city's credit structure, are cited in a report on Baltimore's finances, now being distributed by Lazard Freres & Co., Inc., New York investment banking house.

The report says that "although the inadequacy of State aid for emergency relief in 1936 somewhat weakened the city's cash position, and there has been a moderate increase in both the budget and the tax rate for the current year, we feel that these developments are of decidedly minor significance."

Retail Trade Continues Rise Over Last Year

Pace Slackens but Sales Hold 3 to 12 Per Cent Above Year Ago.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Nov. 19.—Retail trade for the country as a whole this week edged 1 to 3 per cent above last week, but clearance sales and early Christmas shoppers were responsible for the betterment, Dun & Bradstreet reported today. In many centers, volume dipped.

"Rising unemployment and restricted consumer buying" coupled with "spread of uncertainty" regarding the industrial outlook, crowded briskness from most trade channels, the credit agency said.

Despite a duller pace, retail sales for the country held 3 to 12 per cent above the corresponding period a year ago.

"Most of the principal wholesale markets recorded fewer orders than during the week preceding, although it was common knowledge that many stores were in need of a number of items to freshen stocks," Dun & Bradstreet added.

"Retail inventories in some sections of the country have been worked lower than would be safe for any abrupt upturn in consumption. Merchants have confined their coverings to urgent necessities, contending that prompt deliveries and current prices will be available for at least several months. . . .

"Buyers' orders declined for the week, reducing to 5 to 10 per cent the gain over wholesale volume for the 1936 period."

$50,000,000 Bills Offered by Treasury

The Secretary of the Treasury gives notice that tenders are invited for Treasury bills to the amount of $50,000,000, or thereabouts. They will be 114-day bills and will be sold on a discount basis to the highest bidders.

Tenders will be received at the Federal Reserve banks or branches up to 2 p. m. on Monday. Tenders will not be received at the Treasury Department.

European Countries Take Back Gold

The Commerce Department said yesterday that United States exports and imports of gold nearly balanced for the week ended November 12. Exports amounted to $15,060,860, the first substantial shipments in nearly two years. Imports totaled $15,780,900.

Although Treasury Secretary Morgenthau announced the sale of $10,250,000 worth of gold to the French stabilization fund on November 8, actual exports to France amounted to only $9,999,998. England took $5,060,242 of the metal. Nearly all the incoming gold, $13,-193,156 of it, came from Japan.

Stocks Decline Sharply With More Active Trading; U. S. Bonds Hold Firm.

New York, Nov. 19.—Stocks broke badly on the fifth consecutive day of decline. Losses ranged from 1 to 8 points in the active common shares. At the lowest of the day the averages stood slightly above the worst of last month. Current prices for leading stocks now range 3 to nearly 12 points under the closing levels of last week.

Selling was heaviest during the lunch hour and in the closing hour. Trading volume rose sharply to around 1,900,000 shares, the largest in a week, and the market produced only weak rallying power. Grains also fell. December wheat closed 1¾ cents lower at 90 cents a bushel. Dollars were steady and United States bonds were unusually strong, the market noting the volume of Federal Reserv Bank purchasing.

Stocks opened fractionally lower and milled around until noon when a heavy wave of liquidation swept prices down 1 to 3 points. The blast put the tickers behind in the reporting job and put lumps in the throats of stockholders who have been hoping that, after four consecutive declines, a rally was due. The previous low of the year, October 10, was not reached, but a large number of stocks sold at their worst of the year. Other active issues came close.

Heavy Falls.

Steel was active and weak, giving up 2 or 3 points, which was about the measure of the decline in Chrysler, General Electric, General Motors and Telephone. Among the stocks which sold at new low prices for the year were Smelters, du Pont, Dow Chemical, Case, Caterpillar, Cerro de Pasco, Harvester, Loews, Libby Owens and Western Union. Case broke 8 points. Bastman gave up 6 points. Large losses were taken in some of the preferred issues.

While the business news is full of reports of layoffs, closed factories and other developments to show that a trade recession is taking place, the natural accompaniment of that is a reduction of bank credit in use and a rise in reserves. Under such circumstances it seems unnecessary for the Federal Reserve banks to add to the redundancy of credit, but that is just what they are doing. After the initial purchase last week of $11,000,000 in United States bonds, the central banks this week added $18,000,000. That support helped to give a steady tone to the bond market, but money rates in any event are in no immediate danger of rising.

Bank Loans Decrease.

Brokers' loans fell another $8,000,000 and commercial loans in New York City were cut $31,000,000. Declining demand for loans forced the banks to turn to investments, and New York bank purchases of United States bonds rose $31,000,000, making doubly unnecessary the Federal Reserve bank purchases. The monetary gold stock for the first week in several years was unchanged at $12,789,000,000. Contrary to seasonal tendencies, circulation fell sharply and excess reserves climbed $30,000,000 to a grand total of $1,-100,000,000.

The money market is doing no more than confirming the trade figures. The distance already traveled by business deflation and the momentum the movement has attained suggest that it will require a few months for full recovery, even with the most favorable developments at Washington, but sound measures taken by Congress will be of great value. A failure to realize the gravity of the situation and to meet it properly easily could bring about another trade depression worse than the one from which we were beginning to emerge, because we have less strength with which to meet it.

Profits Tax.

While Congressmen continued to discuss the lynching bill, the revision of the undistributed profits tax law and new taxation to provide much-needed revenue, Chairman Eccles of the Federal Reserve Board has given a hint of how the wind is blowing. It will not do to take Mr. Eccles as a spokesman of President Roosevelt, toothache or no toothache, but what he says on the subject of a balanced budget looks plausible. Mr. Eccles was quoted as saying that he thought this a poor time to talk of balancing the budget. He would have been nearer the truth had he said this is a poor time to expect a balanced budget, and the same goes for next year.

Prospect for Inflation.

We may get revision of profits taxes and we may get a sales tax, but tax collections from all sources, including the social security taxes, are bound to fall next year, while the job of reducing expenditures will prove to be a heavy one for any administration. There have been few instances in history when any government has deliberately instituted a deflationary program, except when that patently was the only way of staving off national bankruptcy. The most that usually has happened is that downright inflationary measures have been avoided. Our action on bank reserves was merely meant to slow down inflation.

As business recession, and especially the fall in farm prices, continues, the pressure upon the Government to use some more of its currency and credit inflationary powers will rapidly increase. To be effective in creating inflation a change in psychology also will be required. There must be confidence in profits for credit to be put to use and a destruction of confidence in the dollar for currency inflation to occur.

Farm Purchases.

Weakness in commodity prices, most pronounced recently in livestock, especially hogs, grain and cotton, is pounding on the farm implement and mail order shares. Farm implement stocks today were highly unpopular and many who had held on in the expectation of a new Government subsidy program that would keep the farmer's purchasing power high in spite of everything began to have their doubts. Those taking the bearish view felt that the rousing of Congress over the State of national finances might put a brake on Secretary Wallace's ever normal granary plan in order to relieve the ever abnormal Treasury. In any event if the deflation goes much further all the farmers can hope for is some form of relief rather than a scheme to provide even larger income. The good effect of a large crop movement as an offset to declining general business already has been dissipated.

Odd Lots.

Irreverent Wall street men are said to have asked why the national anthem has been changed from "The Star-Spangled Banner" to the "Broken Down Merry-Go-Round." . . . A. O. Smith shares never recovered, even in the market's period of strength, from the jolt received on investigation of alleged manipulation a year or so ago. When the shares were brought over from the Curb they had a rather inauspicious start, as they shortly fell abruptly after having had a good run just before the shift in trading took place. Public interest in the stock undoubtedly would be greater if the company would conform to the general principles adhered to by other corporations with securities listed on the exchange and publish quarterly reports. Instead, the Smith reports are of the 12 months running variety, the nightmare of the analyst and a good cause for caution on the part of investors. . . . The anniversary of strikes in General Motors factories is being celebrated with strikes. . . . Demand for some type of labor-saving calculating machines for office use is said to be rising, a natural sequence of a period of declining business.

Japan Sells Bonds For 'China Incident'

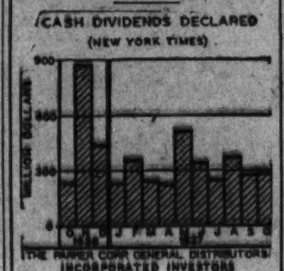
October Dividends 27% Over Year Ago



Boston, Mass., Nov. 19.—"You can't eat your cake and have it" is an adage which applies to stock dividends. If corporations are forced to pay out all earnings in dividends there is no increase in the intrinsic value of the stock and no reserve for poor times. October dividend declarations exceeded a year ago by 27 per cent.

Gen. Elec. Votes $1 on Common

New York, Nov. 19 (AP).—Directors of General Electric Co., declared today a final dividend of $1 on the common stock payable December 20 to stock of record November 26. The company has paid 40 cents a share in recent quarters. In a statement the company said "until last year it was the practice to pay the fourth quarterly dividend in January of the following year. An estimate has been made of the company's income for 1937 and based on this the directors have declared a dividend of $1 as the final dividend for 1937. A year ago the final dividend was 75 cents."

Colt Extra.

Colt's Patent Fire Arms Manufacturing Co., Hartford, Conn., announced today an extra dividend of $2.37½ cents and a quarterly dividend of 50 cents on the common stock both payable December 20 to stock of record December 1. The company paid 37½ cents quarterly on September 30.

Outdoor Advertising.

General Outdoor Advertising Co., Chicago, announced a dividend of $6 on the preferred stock, on account of accumulations, payable December 21 to stock of record December 9. This payment clears up arrears and includes current quarterly dividend.

Bon Ami Extra.

Directors of Bon Ami Co. authorized an extra dividend of $2 and 2/200th of a share of class "A" stock for each share of class "A" held, and an extra of $1 and 1/200th share of "A" on each share of class "B" stock, all payable December 15 to holders of record December 1.

Chesapeake Extra.

Cleveland, Nov. 19 (AP).—Directors of Chesapeake Corporation declared today an extra dividend of one-fifth of a share of Chesapeake & Ohio Railway Co. common stock per share of corporation stock, payable November 30 to holders of record November 26. Luxury Buying Halts After 3-Year Climb

Fur Sales in 236 Department Stores Fall Below Year Ago.

Minneapolis, Nov. 19.—The first recessions in the public's buying of luxury goods, after three years of unbroken gains, were shown in a study of Nation-wide department store sales for the third quarter of 1937, by Northwestern National Life Insurance Co.

Sales of furs in the 236 department stores covered by the report showed a decline of 1.9 per cent for the third quarter of 1937 compared to the corresponding period of last year; this contrasted with a gain of 32.3 per cent in the first six months of 1937, over the first half of 1936. The halt in the spectacular three-year expansion in fur sales climaxed an advance in fur prices which has been greater than that in any other line of goods in the general commodity field. As the percentages above are on dollar volumes, the decline in unit sales is somewhat greater, due to the increase in prices from a year ago.

Always sensitive to residential construction trends, sales of electric household appliances for the third quarter of 1937 were off 2.3 per cent from the same period last year, after scoring a 12.4 per cent increase in the first six months.

The remaining five of the seven key lines of "prosperity goods" covered in the survey, namely, household furniture, pianos, jewelry, sporting goods and luggage, showed continued gains over last year, though at a diminishing rate as compared to the first six months.

ELLIS, ANDREW J. In memory of our dear grandfather, ANDREW J. ELLIS, who passed away four years ago today, November 20, 1933.

His memory is as dear today.
As in the hour he passed away.
HIS LOVING GRANDCHILDREN.

ELLIS, ANDREW J. In loving remembrance of our dear husband and father, ANDREW J. ELLIS, who passed away four years ago today, November 20, 1933.

It is sweet to remember him who once was here,
Though as to us he is just as dear.
The midnight stars shine on the grave
Or the one we loved but could not save.

We miss your loving smile and cheer,
Tho' God has helped us this burden to bear.
Each time the sun goes to rest,
We will miss you more, but God knows best.

HIS LOVING WIFE, MAMIE, AND CHILDREN, FRANK, LITTIE, JOE, EMORY.

TWOMEY, DANIEL D. In loving memory of our devoted father, DANIEL D. TWOMEY, who departed this life 13 years ago today, November 20, 1924.

Bob Burns Says—

The only way you can expect to have a successful partnership in marriage is to take your wife into your confidence. I had an uncle who had an extravagant wife but he didn't mind as long as his business was good, but finally he had a long run of hard luck and one day he went to his wife and told her point-blank, he says "Dear, I'll have'ta ask you to watch the nickles."

The next night, his wife came to him and says "Honey, I went down to get that $14 hat you promised me and the only decent lookin' dress I could find to go with it cost $114—so I charged it."

He says "Well, that's gonna hit me pretty hard—why in the world didn't you call me?" and she says "Well, I would have had to use a pay phone and you told me to watch the nickles!"

Doomed by Food Fatal to 7, Other Partakers Sought

Tucumcari, N. Mex., Nov. 19 (AP). Roundup of all unsuspecting victims of a slow, fatal food poisoning was under way tonight as health authorities counted seven dead and seven more possibly dying from effects of home-preserved chili peppers eaten at a funeral luncheon Monday.

As many as 30 persons may have partaken of the spoiled food, officials said. Of the seven living, only one is considered out of danger. She is 16-year-old Corina Benavides.

Physicians were helpless before the poison—diagnosed as botulism, nearly always fatal.

Most critically ill tonight were four members of the Marquez family, two of whose number died previously.
